Admiral Standley Returns From Moscow

MOVE LINKED TO EXPECTED 3-WAY TALKS

State Department Says He'll Consult on Problems That Allies Will Discuss.

RESIGNATION RUMORED

Washington Speculates Envoy Will Give Up Post After He Gets Back.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The state department announced today that Admiral William Standley, ambassador to Russia, is returning home for consultations.

A state department spokesman said the consultations will be in connection with discussions which are now being carried on with the British and Soviet governments concerning diplomatic problems.

There was immediate speculation as to whether Admiral Standley will return to Moscow as ambassador. It was believed he would relinquish his post when he arrives in this country.

Active discussions are now under way between the American, British and Soviet governments to prepare for a meeting of high ranking officers in Moscow, probably next month. It is assumed that Admiral Standley will participate in the final deliberations in Washington concerning the American views which are to be outlined at the tripartite conference.

Admiral Standley created a sensation last March by charging publicly in Moscow that the Soviet government was withholding from the Russian people the facts concerning American aid to that country.

The admiral's charges brought a quick disavowal from the then undersecretary of state, Sumner Welles, who said that Standley's statement had been made without prior consultation with, or reference to, the American government.

Persistent rumors followed that Admiral Standley would resign, but authoritative sources said at the time that he probably would

'Hurry Up' Call Goes Out on Driver Licenses.

A "hurry up" call went out today to Richland county motorists urging them to buy their 1944 drivers' licenses before the Sept. 30 deadline.

Jack Berger, deputy registrar, said today motorists are not permitted to drive after Sept. 30 without a new license though the licenses will be on sale until April 1.

According to local auto club figures 19,000 operator and chauffeur licenses were sold in 1942. During September last year 12,239 licenses were sold as against 4,171 sold to date this year. This means that more than 8,000 motorists still need to obtain driving permits.

Berger said the auto club office on North Mulberry street will be open Monday until 8 p. m. to accommodate war workers who are unable to buy licenses at any other time. He urged other persons to come from 8:30 to 11 a. m. and from 1:30 to 4 p. m. to get the best service.

Communists Comment on U. S. Plans for Election.

MOSCOW —(AP)— The Communist party newspaper Pravda commented caustically today on American politics and preparations for next year's presidential election.

"Although the United States is at war, the electoral campaign is again starting early," it asserted. The struggle of interests connected with the election is already obvious in Washington.

SET CLOCKS BACK

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Clevelanders were asked today by Mayor Frank J. Lausche to set their clocks back one hour on Sunday, Sept. 26, to comply with a city ordinance that places the city on the state's slow time during the winter months.

WAVE, 23 Sailors Killed In Norfolk Blast

Fires Raze Three Hangars at Navy Air Base.

(By Associated Press)

NORFOLK, Va.—Twenty-three sailors and a WAVE were dead today following a mighty explosion at the naval air base here, and it is feared more of the critically injured may succumb.

The explosion, which was caused by "ammunition in transit," rocked the city of Norfolk yesterday morning, shattered windows two miles away and could be heard at Suffolk, 20 miles from its point of origin.

There has been no report as yet from a four-man naval board appointed to investigate the tragedy, nor would the navy disclose any further details.

Fire following the explosion destroyed three hangars at the air station, and other buildings were damaged. Windows at the post and throughout the northern section of the city were broken by the concussion.

The number of dead, first reported to be seventeen, rapidly mounted during the afternoon as those most seriously injured died in hospitals, bringing the total to the present figure of 24—all enlisted personnel.

The number of injured, including some civilians, stands at 250, with 13 enlisted men considered to be in critical condition.

The WAVE, Seaman 2nd Class Elizabeth Korensky, Philadelphia, is believed to be the first member of the naval women's auxiliary to be killed in line of duty.

CONGRESS IN ACCORD WITH FDR POLICY

President's Suggestion of Extending Good Neighbor Plan Gets Backing.

HOUSE ACTION DUE

Senate Expected to Follow Up Lower Chamber's Study Of Fulbright Resolution.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's suggestion that the good neighbor policy of the western hemisphere be extended to the rest of the world as peace insurance furnished a generally sympathetic congress today with a guide for action on its own postwar foreign policy resolutions in the coming weeks.

The Fulbright resolution putting congress on record as favoring United States membership in international machinery with adequate power to prevent aggression will be considered in the house Monday under procedure barring amendments and requiring a two-thirds vote to pass. A small group seeking to qualify such an advance commitment will contest the method of consideration.

Senate action is expected later on a similar proposal.

Readiness to utilize force has been advocated by Secretary of State Hull and Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the senate foreign relations group.

While the word "force" has no place in the inter-American system of cooperation in settling hemispheric disputes, administration officials said the president was speaking very generally about extending the good neighbor policy to the world and that this did not necessarily mean he would oppose the use of armies and navies to put down aggressions.

In his message to congress yesterday, the chief executive said that even as the war progresses, the United States seeks "a national cooperation with other nations toward the end that world aggression be ended and that fair international relationships be es-

Bring Big Italian Port Within Range Of Artillery; Germans Admit Fierce Attacks as British, Americans Seize Town of Roccadaspide.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—(UP)—The Italian island of Ischis, 18 miles southwest of Naples and off the Gulf of Naples, has surrendered to an Allied naval force, a communique said today.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—Allied forces have seized two more islands off the Italian west coast, one only 12 miles from Naples and the other within 70 miles of Rome, and the Fifth army has smashed another two miles inland from Salerno gulf to capture Roccadspide, it was announced today.

(A German communique broadcast by the Berlin radio said fierce Allied attacks, supported by newly-landed forces, gained in volume at the southeastern sector of the Salerno front. Another German broadcast asserted that 600,000 tons of Allied shipping had been sunk or rendered unserviceable in the Gulf of Salerno by German planes up to Sept. 15.)

The occupation of Procida, a two-mile-long volcanic island 12 miles southwest of Naples, placed the Allies within long-distance artillery range of Italy's biggest port and one of the prime objectives of the hard-won landing on the Salerno gulf, some 30 miles to the south. Ponza island, which also was occupied, lies south of Rome and 67 miles almost due west of Naples.

(The German Transocean agency reported in a Berlin broadcast that Nazi troops have occupied Elba island, off the Italian west coast 50 miles south of Leghorn.)

The Fifth army made its deepest penetration yet of the Italian mainland with the capture of Roccadaspide, 13 miles inland from Agropoli at the southern end of the 26-mile-long Salerno gulf bridgehead.

Front dispatches said the Germans had begun pulling back their forces from the southern and central sectors opposite the Fifth army's bridgehead and the Anglo-American invaders were plunging inland with gathering momentum.

The Fifth army now was in full contact with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army, which had driven 200 miles up Italian west coast in two weeks, and their combined forces were expected to speed an offensive aimed squarely at Naples and Rome, then northern Italy.

A naval communique said troops, men and supplies were continuing to pour ashore into the Salerno bridgehead while the big guns of both British and American warships joined Allied air fleets in pouring a torrent of steel and explosives into

FROST BITES GARDEN CROPS

Believe Serious Damage In County Avoided; Mercury Goes Down to 34.

Late gardens that weren't protected by covering were damaged this morning by the first general frost of the season which arrived nearly three weeks ahead of the average first killing frost date.

With the mercury at 34, only two degrees above freezing, tender garden vegetables were nipped today in the Mansfield area, but it was not believed the damage was extensive.

Warned two days in advance of the frost, many gardeners in the city area covered their tomatoes, peppers, and flowers, the plants most sensative to cold, but large truck gardens generally were left exposed.

The frost was general throughout the state but heaviest in the northern half where the lowest temperature reported this morning was 31 at Canton.

Crop authorities at Ohio State university were unable to say how serious the crop damage was, but one expert commented that "anytime the weather drops to around

Lull Strikes War Loan Drive, Small Sale Listed Today

Richland countians were apparently resting on their laurels today as the Third War Loan drive advanced less than $50,000, the smallest daily sale yet reported.

Only $45,137.50 was added to the till by 262 additional subscribers.

Chairman H. G. Brunner today termed yesterday the "turning point" in the drive. He noted that many of the large purchases have already been reported, and the remainder of the drive will be "tough sledding."

E bond purchases headed the list of sales for yesterday with 233 persons subscribing $10,837.50. To date 3600 persons have invested in E bonds making a total of $217,621.25 subscribed.

With the addition of yesterday's subscriptions the total now stands at $2,703,302.75 or 45 per cent of the $6,060,000 quota set for the county.

In Washington today the treasury department reported 10 states have reached or gone over the half way mark in the national drive for 15 billion dollars. The states are New Hampshire, New York, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Maine, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Returned Vet of 37th Tells How Ohioans Wiped Out Japs

Mansfield soldiers, members of old Battery D, Ohio National Guard, now a part of the 37th division which took part in the capture of the Jap-held base at Munda on New Georgia Island "had to keep awake in their foxholes or a Jap would crawl in with them."

That's what Cpl Dale Bostwick of Columbus, one of the four veterans of the terrific fighting had to say when he returned to the United States to attend Officer Candidate school.

He described the 23-day campaign for the Jap airbase to the Associated Press as "one grand push."

"We backed 'em right up to the ocean and then poured it into 'em. I'd say there wasn't a live Jap left on Munda when we got through. Every man got his share."

Bostwick spoke highly of Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commander of the 37th.

"He wouldn't tell us where to go, he'd lead us," the 25-year-old soldier said. "I'll tell you this much—General Beightler was out of his foxhole a lot of times when we were in 'em. He's got the admiration of every boy there."

The Ohioans proved they could take it during those 23 days, Bostwick reported.

"I didn't think my body could take some of the things we went through," he reflected grimly. "Things like lying out in the rain with no shelter and mosquitos eating you up. We never changed clothing in all those 23 days. We just laid there in the mud because there wasn't anything else to do."

NOTED EATERY GOES MEATLESS

OPA Clamps Down on Famed Meckleburg Gardens.

CINCINNATI —(INS)— Meckleburg Gardens, noted Cincinnati eatery, today felt the heavy hand of the OPA.

State Tax Commissioner William S. Evatt refused to approve a board of education plan to borrow against anticipated collections of delinquent taxes, on the grounds that the school board in Toledo can not legally increase salaries beyond the point where it has money to pay for them.

Ringling Circus Arrives for 2-Performance Stand In City

Mansfielders didn't have to get up in the dark this morning to see the big circus wagons and elephants unloaded and hauled across the north end of the city to the fairground where the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey show will give performances this afternoon and tonight.

Arriving late from Marion, the circus didn't start to unload until nearly 8 a. m. By that time several hundred spectators had gathered at the East Longview avenue crossing of the Erie railroad and at the fairground to watch the tons of equipment and animals moved into place and the "big top" go up.

Small but powerful tractors hauled the red and yellow wagons and the show's tents and seats off flatcars at the Longview avenue siding and over Harker street to the showground. Flares at street intersections marked the route for the drivers.

The mess tent and some of the tractors and cranes were moved first to enable the crew to have breakfast and start operations at the fairground. A little later the "big top" poles and canvas and

AGREE ON LINE REMOVAL PLAN

Airport Committee, A. T. and T. Reach Accord; Cable to Cost City $17,000.

Clearning another step in preliminary requirements for Mansfield's airport expansion program, Mansfield today had reached an informal agreement with the American Telephone and Telegraph company for installing its lines underground on the 1,000-acre port site.

The Chamber of Commerce airport committee meeting with A. T. and T. representatives yesterday agreed that a $17,000 charge against the city was a satisfactory figure for removing present lines and installing approximately 22,000 feet of underground cable.

The cost would represent labor and material for installing the cable, L. W. Brehman, division engineer, and C. H. Tesky, division attorney, both of Cleveland, told the C. of C. committee and Mayor W. J. Locke yesterday.

The company, they said, agrees to assume all engineering and other costs except material and labor. The city would be given existing equipment for salvage purposes.

Brehman told the conferees that under the agreement the A. T. and T., assumes approximately $10,000 of the cost of the project.

The two representatives said

Como Threatens To Cop Sinatra's Low-Note Crown

NEW YORK —(UP)— A low-note tempest burst along Broadway today as Perry Como became "crooner of the year" of Swooners, Inc., and the odds in the Sinatra sweepstakes took another jolt.

The repeat warfare over the crooner's crown first came into the open when a Broadway columnist asked the question: "Is Sinatra here to stay?" Como seized first place to ease him out. Dick Haymes, now in Hollywood ran a close second.

Swooners, Inc., a band of teenage girls who guarantee their hero a swooning audience at any public appearance, shifted their loyalty to Como because "he sends us most."

According to this anti-Sinatra faction, "the voice" is just a whisper and if the eyes have it, liquid-eyed Perry can cop the crooner's crown with his first motion picture. With a seven year contract, Como is to make his first picture—at $25,000 per—in November.

STORM NEARS

Hurricane Expected to Strike Texas This Afternoon.

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—A severe tropical hurricane, accompanied by winds up to 100 miles an hour, hovered in the Gulf of Mexico today, 130 miles east of Corpus Christi, Texas, and the weather bureau said indications were it would move inland sometime during the afternoon.

The bureau said the disturbance probably would cross the coast in the Freeport-Galveston, Tex., area, and would cause strong winds as far east as New Orleans and west to Arkansas Pass, Texas.

Winds of 75 to 85 miles an hour and gusts up to 100 near the center were forecast by the weather bureau at midnight.

Near the Texas-Louisiana border and south of the storm center to Port O'Conner, Tex., the wind was expected to reach a velocity of 60 to 75 miles, the bureau said.

LINE'S THIN

Only 35 Civil War Veterans Are Expected at Convention.

MILWAUKEE —(AP)—While the union which they held together with a thin blue line goes marching on, the men who fought in the war between the states are re-forming in a scant but still stout-hearted company, perhaps for the last time.

Only about 35 of the nation's Civil War veterans are expected to be present when the 78th national meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic opens Sunday.

ROAD BACK: Hail Fall of Lae As Stride Toward Philippines

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific—Allied capture of bomb-wrecked Lae, once Japan's greatest New Guinea base, was announced in a communique today and Gen. Douglas MacArthur hailed the victory as a stride toward his avowed goal reconquest of the Philippines.

"With God's help," MacArthur said, "we are making our way back."

Lae fell Thursday to American and Australian troops who set siege lines around it in amphibious and aerial operations 12 days before. Its garrison fled for the hills without hope of escape.

The triumph, rolling the Japanese from nearly 50 miles of the New Guinea coast, came as a burst of aerial activity in the Solomons signified a bitter—and possibly climactic—struggle for control of the air lines in that area.

MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific, said the victory at Lae "in the face of superior forces available to the enemy" was a serious blow to Japanese hopes of retaining their weakening hold on the outer lines of bases north of Australia.

His brief statement, made from New Guinea field headquarters, gave no hint whether the next phase of the offensive would continue westward along the coastline or spring toward the major enemy hub for the Southern Pacific reaches—Rabaul, on New Britain 400 miles northeast of Lae.

The communique said Lae had been reduced to a "shambles" by

AIM: Reds Drive From Fallen Bryansk Toward White Russia

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW—Russia's mighty Red army thundered westward toward new objectives today with the great central front bastion of Bryansk back in Soviet hands after bitter battles had been fought through the streets of that city.

The fall of Bryansk and the adjacent industrial center of Bezhitza removed a major Nazi obstacle from the path of the Russian drive toward White Russia on the border of Poland. Capture of the two cities climaxed a strategic maneuver that snapped the jaws of a giant pincer movement around German fortifications on the west bank of the Desna river.

Two powerful Soviet columns stormed across the Desna and up the steep banks of the river in an encircling movement that crushed the Germans within less than 24 hours. Red army units advancing from the east under cover of mortar and artillery barrages, smashed into Bryansk and met the enemy in hand to hand combat in the streets.

Russian forces swinging down from the north attacked Bezhitsa, five miles west of Bryansk, and captured that town.

More than 4,000 Germans were reported slain in yesterday's fighting in major sectors. Six nazi infantry divisions, totalling close to 90,000 men, were routed in the Bryansk area alone.

Today the spotlight swung in the direction of Kiev, capital

HELL AND HIGH WATER

CHAPTER XXV

When the Hickorys drew aside and talked in whispers his gaze never left them. After they returned to the fire it held fast to first one and then another of them. His heavy immobility covered a lightning alertness. Never did his right hand stray far from the .45 at his side.

Jake and Bart rolled up in their blankets and fell asleep. Cass sat tailor fashion opposite Greer. Evidently the brothers had decided to divide guard duty during the night. They did not trust the red head any more than he did them.

Greer brought his blanket and gave it to the girl. "I'll not be sleeping tonight," he assured her. "I'll be sitting here not ten feet away from you. You wouldn't be more safe if you were in yore own bed at home. These men won't hurt you, unless they're pushed to it to save their hides. That time hasn't come and probably won't."

"I'll never forget what you're doing for me," she said, gratitude shining in her eyes. "And if it's ever my turn to help you I'll do it."

"The less you have to do with the like of us the better," he told her gruffly. "We're a bad outfit through and through."

"You're not," she flung back quickly. "I'll never believe it" Her voice dropped a note, almost to a whisper. "When they spoke of someone coming to help them to escape, did they mean Mr. Sugg?"

"I'm not talking," he answered roughly.

"Because if it is Mr. Sugg, I'm sure he'll be on our side."

"Go to sleep and quit gabbing," he ordered.

She did not expect to sleep, but after a time she did, in troubled naps from which she woke jerkily, to see her champion sitting with first one and then another of the Hickorys opposite him. Sometimes he was smoking stolidly. Once he was drinking coffee.

"It's grand stuff to keep you awake, Jake," she heard him say derisively. "I've been sleeping too much lately. It's nice to sit up for a change and think of the good friends I have"

"Now Rush, you don't want to make a mistake about us," Jake replied in an ingratiating voice "We been pals a long time."

"I'll make no mistake, Jake. When we break camp you boys can go one way and I'll go another."

"Just as you say, Rush. No hard feelings on our side."

They ate breakfast before sun up and at once put out the fire to prevent the smoke from betraying the location of the camp. To the captive it became clear that the hunted men were marking time until the arrival of the accomplice they had mentioned the night before.

The two younger brothers left the pocket through which the creek ran and rode up the steep hillside to keep watch above against a surprise. They knew Broderick must be combing the bad lands for his daughter and they were prepared to get out hurriedly if necessary. All the horses were saddled and left tied in a grove of young willows by the creek.

Jake Hickory stayed in camp to keep an eye on Greer and Miss Broderick. He was plainly nervous. Since the daughter of J. A. had been with them this was no safe terrain. He looked a dozen times at the big fat watch he carried.

"Why doesn't Sugg come?" he blurted out at last. "I reckon he doesn't give a cuss what becomes of us so he keeps in the clear. I'll learn him about that, sure as he's a foot high If they get us, I'll sure drag him down too."

Greer looked quickly at the girl. This was the first time any of them had mentioned Sugg by name. The color had faded out of her face. She knew now, beyond any question of doubt, that the man she had promised to marry was in partnership with these bandits and probably was in a sense their leader. Every word that Bob Lee had told her father was true

"I sometimes wonder how any fellow with such a chicken liver as yours ever came to live outside the law," the redbearded man said contemptuously. "You're all the time scared somebody is getting ready to sell you out. When I'm out of this job I'll be through with you, Jake. No sand in yore craw."

Jake stopped in his nervous stride and stared down at the other man, in his eyes a hungry desire to drag out his revolver and pour lead into his companion. Greer watched him, eyes wary, a thumb hitched in his sagging belt, scorn in the cold mocking eyes.

The redheaded man shook his head. "Dont try it, Jake," he warned. "You haven't cold nerve enough to go through without bungling. Even if you got me I'd cut you down sure."

The gaze of each man searched the other closely. Willie May stopped breathing. She heard in her breast the ticking of eternity, the beating of the wings of the angel of death. Then the tension slackened. She gave a deep long sigh of relief. Jake had chosen the safer way.

He tried to smile, as a bridge from that perilous moment to one less dangerous. The result was an ugly twisted grin that bared wolfish teeth.

"Why Rush, I wasn't even thinkin' about any such crazy thing," he said in a strained voice.

"Then don't," Greer replied gently, the breath of an icy wind in his words.

Voices came to them from the ridge above. Horsemen showed on the ledge. The sound of an owl's hoot drifted down.

The girl's heart began to beat fast. She recognized the man on one of the horses. The riders disappeared in a fold of the hill and reappeared lower than before. The jeering words of Cass Hickory reached the camp.

"We got a nice surprise for you, Mr. Sugg. They claim one good turn deserves another. While you been sweatin' to get us outa this jam, we have been fixin' up a little party for you. I reckon you'll be right pleased."

Sugg looked down and could not believe his eyes.

That all his plans had come tumbling down like a house of cards Hiram Sugg knew instantly. His thoughts became completely confused trying to seize on an explanation that might satisfy Willie May Only one tenuous hope occurred to him. If he could persuade her that he too was a captive he might yet skirt disaster.

"If she thinks I'm one of you we're sunk," he said in a low voice to Cass. "I can't help you make your getaway."

"Why not?" young Hickory demanded.

"Because I'm going to take her with me when I go, and if she thinks I'm in with you I won't be able to pull Whit Carson's posse out of the way by sending it on a false scent."

"Why does she have to go with you?"

"I won't leave her here. Don't argue with me, Cass. It's got to be the way I say. Act as though I'm your prisoner"

Cass hesitated. He was suspicious of Sugg, yet depended on his help Better play it his way for a while at least, he decided. He shifted the position of his rifle to cover the older man

"Yell out that you have just captured me," Sugg ordered.

The young outlaw did as he was told. "Look what I got here," he shouted. "Found him traipsing the hills like he had lost someone. So I thought I'd bring him into camp"

"Time you got here, Sugg," Jake growled.

"That's right," Cass explained away his brother's remark quickly. "Before he slipped back and brought a bunch of gunmen to round us up."

"Was he aiming to do that?" Jake asked harshly

"I reckon he was looking for his girl," Cass said with a derisive grin.

* * *

Sugg jumped at the out offered. He guessed at the situation and took a chance. "We've been combing the hills for her."

"That so?" jeered Jake. "And now you've found her."

Willie May said. "I'm so glad you've come, Hiram. You can take me home, please"

Jake showed his teeth in an ugly grin "That would be nice, wouldn't it? Mr Sugg would be the whitehaired hero. And what would we be?"

The girl continued quietly, as though Jake had not spoken. "I've told them that I wouldn't tell they are here — not until they have had a chance to get out of the country first. You'll take me home, won't you?"

"I don't know how you came here, but of course I won't go without you. As you say, we'll do no talking about the boys being here until we know they are safe. They can get through to Texas all right if they start tonight." Sugg's gaze rested on the black beady eyes of Jake. "Not a man will interfere with them if they cut through Sunk Bayou and keep going south."

"So you say," Jake's voice was heavy with bitter sarcasm. "How do we know you ain't throwin' us down. The girl will stay right with us till we're in the clear."

"Then you'll never be in the clear. Don't be a numbskull Jake. These hills are lousy with riders hunting for Miss Broderick. The only way to get them out of here and back home is to let me take her to the ranch. Long before we get there we'll meet somebody who will spread the news that the search is over. Inside of a couple of hours all the boys will be drifting down the rim rock all tired out and ready for a long sleep. By night fall there won't be a soul in the bad lands except yourselves. Instead of ruining you, this hunt will work in your favor. After dark, when you make your break to get away, all the men anxious for your scalps will be pounding their ears."

Jake wanted to believe this. It sounded reasonable. But he could not shake his distrust of Sugg. Maybe he was arranging a trap for them. "And while we're skulking through the dark trying to duck bullets you'll be sittin' pretty with yore girl playin' the big man who rescued her, and all the time you as guilty as we are."

Plainly Jake's fear was accented by the bitter bile of jealousy. He could not beat that Sugg should enjoy the favor of a woman he had desired.

The promoter ignored Hickory's mood. He had to erase the effects of what Jake had just said. He laughed, lightly. "Parson Ewing would tell you that we are all miserable sinners, and it's sure enough true. I've been guilty of plenty of things. But let us stick to the point, Jake. I'm offering to help both you and Miss Broderick. I can't leave her here If I did every one of you would come to grief Your only hope is to turn her and me loose"

Rush Greer had listened first to one and then the other. He understood Sugg's dilemma and how smoothly yet desperately he was trying to build in the girl's mind the picture of his innocence. The redbearded man was a realist. He had no grievance against Sugg. What he wanted was first to insure the safety of Miss Broderick and after that his own. The plan just proposed seemed to him a good one.

"My opinion too, Mr Sugg I think you and Miss Broderick will both play fair I'm for turning you both loose."

Willie May knew that Hiram Sugg was fighting hard to hold her trust in him and that young Hickory and Greer were supporting him for reasons of their own. They were trying to get an idea through Jake's thick skull, and they were not succeeding.

"Let's talk this over privately, boys," Cass suggested.

"The Hickorys and Greer moved aside far enough to be out of hearing distance. They took with them Sugg's horse.

"They don't trust us," Sugg told the girl with a rueful smile.

"I don't think the Hickorys trust anybody," she answered

"How do you happen to be here?"

"I rode up to the rim rock and Jake met me. He brought me here because he was afraid I would tell I had seen him."

"I see. Don't worry any more. I'll get you out of this somehow. Greer seems to have some sense."

"He has stood my friend ever since I reached the camp."

"Good. We'll remember that if we ever catch these ruffians."

"I'll never forget it," she said with deep feeling.

He said, "When did Jake find you?"

"Last night, before dark I found him butchering one of my father's steers."

"You must have had a dreadful night."

"Not so bad as it might have been Greer sat up till morning to watch the Hickorys while I slept I was sure he wouldn't let them hurt me if he could help it."

"Some day I'll make that up to him. Thank God that Cass got the drop on me and brought me to the camp. I'll get you out of here, my dear." His voice was warmly confident, his manner cheerful. He wanted her to know that she could depend on him. She believed that she could, yet she felt he was watching her closely to find out whether she was accepting his story. At present she did not mean to clear his mind on that point.

"I know you will," she replied "No matter what it costs me."

She looked at the outlaws, huddled together in argument. "Do you think they will let us go?"

"Yes. Don't worry We've got them on the hip. They have to get rid of the men searching for you" He added, his voice rough with feeling: "I can't have you running risks like this, darling. Marry me at once and let me look after you."

Anger at herself flared out. "I was a fool to come to the rim rock after my father warned me"

"You need a guardian," he smiled· "One who loves you even more than your father."

"I need to have some sense," she evaded, "Because of my foolishness fifty men have been wearing themselves out all night looking for me, I suppose. How did you come to hear I was lost?"

"A man at Atoka told me I couldn't wait to join a posse but started right out."

She hated the role she had to play. Her nature was impetuously honest, but she must pretend young innocence and meet guile with guile The man had dipped deep into evil and lawless ways, and she dared not blaze out at him with indignant contempt of his hypocrisy and baseness. He had not come to find her. He had not known she was lost. She had seen his amazed confusion when he had first looked down and seen her in the camp. Hiram Sugg was an undercover confederate of the bandits and had ridden to their camp with information as to the best route for their escape. Of this she was sure. Nothing he could do or say could shake her certainty.

"When I saw you riding down the trail I knew I was safe," she replied That was literally true, to a degree at least, though not in the sense her words might seem to imply.

He put an arm around her shoulders and his fingers closed on her arm with a friendly pressure. "Nothing can happen to you while I am here," he promised.

The girl's body stiffened. By an effort of the will she controlled her desire to shrink from him.

"They're coming back," she said.

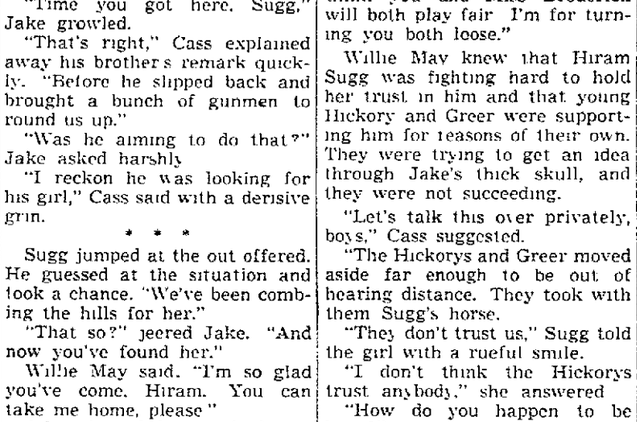
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Renovating Apple Trees for Victory Garden Use.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Assn.)

Any number of Victory gardeners have homesites which boast a few old apple trees, sometimes the uncared-for remnants of a farm orchard which existed before the land was laid out for real estate purposes. Such trees often can be renovated without too much effort and made to produce fruit as their contribution to Victory gardening.

If the apple tree is vigorous, it does not matter too much if it is well along in years. A 40 to 50-year old apple tree, uncared for but still vigorous, is a better potential producer of fruit for home purposes, than a younger, half-starved and ailing apple tree.

Check an old apple tree for suckers and water sprouts. Suckers are those growths pushed up from the ground at or near the base of the trunk. Water sprouts, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, make their appearance on the trunk and main branches of a tree.

If the tree has many strong-growing suckers or water sprouts it indicates a healthy trunk, and a tree worth caring for, even thought it otherwise shows signs of neglect.

If the trunk of a neglected apple tree shows signs of abuse, wrong pruning and decaying stubs, as illustrated, it is not worth saving. In such cases it is better to cut down the old tree and make room for the planting of a new one.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

ENROLLMENT NECESSITATES NEW TEACHER

Miss Joan Poth To Assist at Marguerite Speas Dance Studio.

A registration in the Marguerite Speas dancing school of more than 200 pupils has necessitated the addition of another instructor, Miss Joan Poth, who will assist Miss Speas with beginning and intermediate classes.

The enrollment this year is the highest in the dancing school's eight years of growth in Mansfield.

Miss Poth's assistance will enable Miss Speas to give more time to advanced classes, to the individual problems of all students, to the preparation of her pupils for public performances and to studio management

Classes are now in session at the Speas Studios in all types of dancing including tap, ballet, acrobatic and Spanish, as well as combinations of tap and ballet or tap and acrobatic, and students are already doing work which will lead up to holiday programs, one of which is given each Christmas season at the Richland county children's home

Another special activity of the Studio is the special training which pupils receive for school programs during the year.

Store Stocks Gifts Suggested By Servicemen's Shopping Guild

Packages Must Be Mailed Overseas Not Later Than Oct. 15.

If you've a son, brother, sweetheart, husband or father in the service overseas, or, for that matter, here in the "States," don't try to impress him by sending the biggest or the most elaborate present you can find.

In the first place you can't send him more than 5 pounds at a time if he's overseas. In the second place, he has definite ideas of his own on the subject, as indicated by a recent poll of the gift preferences of several hundred servicemen, conducted by a retail research organization in co-operation with the Servicemen's Shopping Service, Inc., an organization sponsored by the Navy league.

When you shop for your man remember that he's in the army now (navy, marines, coast guard or air corps, the same things "go" in all branches of the service) and he hasn't exactly an overabundance of room in which to store those tempting trifles such as collapsible pool tables and the like

He probably has to pass rigid inspections which mean that all his belongings must be kept out of sight . . . so take heed, look before you buy, and above all send him what he really needs.

At the top of the list of things he really prefers are the following: Address books, writing kits, stationery, money belts, playing cards, leather cigaret cases, bill folds(either with or without insignia), duffle kits, furlough bags, leather pocket picture holders, military sets, miniature games, flexible dog tags and identification bracelets.

The fact that practically every one of these things is small and light in weight makes them excellent for shipping overseas.

Important, too, when shopping for servicemen's gifts is to visit a reliable store where salespeople are well-versed in the pros and cons of army and navy merchandise. One of these is Swank and Watson's, 89 North Main street, which caters to the servicemen.

If you want to pack all the little items you choose into one 5 pound "surprise package," Mrs. Watson reminds you that you must have the written request, together with a postmarked envelope from your hero, when you go to the postoffice; otherwise your carefully chosen gifts will not be accepted for shipment overseas.

If, however, you wish to do so, you may select a whole row of these small but highly prized items, and send one or two at a time in packages of 8 ounces or less. These may be sent without a request from abroad.

Naturally, anything from home is a welcome windfall to boys in other lands. But books, magazines and regular copies of the home town newspaper, plus letters and cards are definitely in the "morale" bracket. There's something about keeping up with the goings on at home that gives an indescribable "connected" feeling and even in busy days like these, it takes only a few moments for instance, to choose a few cards, write a short note or merely sign a name and post one each day.

It's easy to "Keep 'Em Happy With Mail" this way and at Swank and Watson's you'll find an especially attractive display of appropriate cards for the service men.

A practical service kit for Ronson lighters is also available at this store now. It contains everything necessary for repairing and refilling his Ronson lighter which cannot be replaced this war time.

Families of service men will be interested in the attractive frames for showing off their hero's picture, several of which are displayed at Swank and Watson's.

Shown above are volunteer workers of the Servicemen's Shopping Service, Inc., an organization sponsored by the Navy League, polling the gift preferences of men in uniform.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1943.

Someone asks how "freedom from fear" can be attained while driving on thin tires.

You may also have noticed it, but Claude Callan, of the Kansas City Times, puts it this way: "A big man tries to make you feel at ease in his presence, but a little man tries to make you feel as small as he is."

No Good News for the Axis

THERE can have been no good news for the Axis in the report of President Roosevelt to congress yesterday.

For if, as he said, the invasion of Italy, now becoming more and more successful, was planned as far back as the Casablanca conference, then the Axis can be certain that the president spoke the truth when he said that the "time and place" for new blows had been set when he and Winston Churchill met at Quebec.

And should the plans laid there work as well as the ones made at Casablanca, then the future of the Axis is dark indeed.

So far as the domestic front is concerned, the president's message was good news mixed with caution. For while the president spoke in laudatory terms of our war output, he warned also that we were a long, long way from victory in any major theater of the war.

That warning may have been slightly unnecessary. Not many thinking Americans—and Americans do think, regardless of what the bureaucrats in Washington believe—hold the opinion that victory is within our grasp just because we have landed in Italy and are slowly regaining Pacific islands from the Japanese.

There may also be thinking Americans who will give considerable thought to the president's words about our tremendous record in producing the tools of war.

For all the strategy that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill could devise would be worthless without the military skill to translate it into victory and the tools with which to do the job.

Therefore it seems no less than the just reward of American industry—large and small—for the president to speak warm words of praise for its effort.

On the other hand, it must be somewhat of a strange sensation for American industry to hear itself praised by Mr. Roosevelt. It can hardly forget that for the past 10½ years it has been criticised, abused, regulated, legislated against, sued and hamstrung—and constantly threatened with more of the same by the administration's New Dealers.

Despite this battering, the nation's industries have made themselves the backbone of the country's war effort. To put it mildly, then, the president's commendation was warranted.

All in all, the president's report was as complete and factual as any such report could be in wartime. No less important than his report on progress to date and his promise that new blows would be struck was his reference to the future. The country will be in general agreement with his assertion that not only must the Nazis but the Prussian militarists be driven out of power, if we are to have a real peace.

And there is reason to believe that his announcement that he favored extension of the "good neighbor" policy to the whole world when peace comes—instead of letting the United States, Britain and Russia police it—is the result of the pressure of public opinion.

Recognition of Russian Church

RECOGNITION of the Russian church, with permission to establish a synod, is not entirely surprising to those who have followed with any care the history of Russia in the quarter century since the revolution.

Under the czars the church administration had itself, to some extent, become corrupt. Political and ecclesiastical administrations were so intertwined, both in fact and in the minds of the people, that the whole structure apparently had to go down together. To the leaders of the revolution there seemed, at the time, no other way. Reaction against political enslavement carried with it reaction against all bonds, including those of church membership.

But since the revolution much water has gone under the bridge. The liberties of the people have in many important fields been established. Church members have shed their blood as freely for Russia as atheists and agnostics. Church administrators have stood by the government in the war instead of undermining it.

The church seems to the present leaders to have demonstrated its right to recognition. Freedom of religion, set down in the charter of the Soviets, is becoming a fact. And the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has become so firmly fixed that it fears little or nothing from internal sources.

Gains of present-day Russia over the czarist regime which these simple statements imply are so great as to be almost incomprehensible to Americans. For Americans never suffered as Russians did under the czars.

Danger In Unlimited Credit

A ONCE prominent banker lately filed a bankruptcy application in which he listed $2,500,000 debts as against only $500 assets. He owed various six-figure amounts to banks other than his own, to financiers and large corporations. Despite the largeness of their operations they seem to have been as trusting as the neighborhood grocer.

The average man reads with amazement of the credit this banker was able to get. Most people encounter difficulty when they try to stall off the butcher or plumber for a longer time than usual. If they could take a leaf from this man's book, life would be very simple—for a short time. Then comes the piper for his pay.

Where Ancient and Modern Meet

WORKERS digging foundations for the construction of the new Farkhad hydroelectric station in Uzbekistan, Russian Turkestan, unearthed the remains of a large medieval settlement and burial ground. Ornaments of Syrian, Iranian and Chinese origin. Chinese copper coins of the third century, a large sacrificial dish, various ornamental dishes with handles in the shape of animals, were also found.

The contrast between the ultra-modern hydro-electric machinery which will go into that station and the ancient works of craftsmanship is a sharp one. The old world once more touches the new, and the life of humanity is seen, for all its differences, as one.

CRADLE OF VICTORY

Why Must Morgenthau Depress Us About Seriousness of War?

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE PAST FEW DAYS have produced three notable achievements for Allied arms.

First in American hearts must come the good news that the gallant American and British troops on the bloody beaches of Salerno not only have made secure their bridgehead but have seized the initiative and are on the offensive. Our boys have weathered the initial stage of a nasty German storm.

Second, and more important militarily, is the unemotional word from Moscow that the Red army has broken the German line in the vitally strategic sector east of the Kiev-Zaporozhe line of the Dnieper river. That vastly increases the gravity of the Hitlerite position.

Third we have the Russian recapture of their big Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk which is, so to speak, the hinge of the narrow gateway the Nazis have been holding at the Kuban peninsula entrance to the Caucasus. This jeopardizes the whole German position at the last remaining vantage ground from which they could glimpse the lakes of golden oil for lack of which they are in dire straits.

This is the ninth day of the battle of Salerno and, while heavy fighting continues, it goes all right. Thousands of reinforcements are being poured into our ranks. While the Germans have the advantage of their fortified positions on the heights overlooking the open beaches, Allied warships control the sea and Allied warplanes dominate the air.

The Nazi defenses are being mercilessly blasted with both bombs and big naval shells. The Allies are employing the greatest concentration of airpower seen in the Mediterranean.

And elements of General Montgomery's veteran British Eighth army have reached the Salerno battlefield in the race from the south. The Germans are threatened with being caught between two forces.

By the way, if the reader will excuse an interpolation while we are on the subject of Italy, there are a couple of questions I wish somebody would answer for me.

Is it necessary, in order to sell bonds and keep the American public from "thus foolish, childish overoptimism," to make such depressing speeches as our usually smiling friend the secretary of the treasury made recently about the Italian campaign? Does the man-in-the-street really have to be treated as a psychological guinea pig, so that he won't become complacent, or is he in fact a pretty solid and understanding citizen? Why does Mr. Morgenthau have to talk about "when and if we conquer Italy"—why the "if"?

Why is this "the beginning of the war, so far as the United States is concerned," when hearts and backs have been broken for almost two years without a whimper to meet colossal demands? After all, who is there who doesn't realize that we have tremendous sacrifices ahead of us, both on the battle fields and on the home front?

The Nazis liked part of Mr. Morgenthau's speech so much that they used it for propaganda to buck up their own people. It surely can't be good for both Nazis and Yankees—or is it?

But to get back to our muttons, the Germans on the Russian front are faced with two momentous problems: (1) Whether they can pull back their long, unwieldly, badly mauled line to the defenses of the Dnieper river and there reestablish themselves; (2) Whether they can overcome the grave danger of being cut off in the Crimea, as the result of the fall of Novorossisk and the steadily increasing threat to their right flank near the northern entrance to the Crimean peninsula.

The indications now are that the Nazis' hope of standing off further disastrous reverses must lie in the possibility that the autumn rains, which already have begun, will slow the Russians down until cold weather arrives to freeze the ground. The mud is a terrible impediment during the rainy season.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, Sept. 18, 1923.

Republican county executive committee endorsed Walter S. Bradford for appointment as Mansfield postmaster.

Fire damaged Hunt's news depot, North Main street.

Myron T. Herrick, U. S. ambassador to France, was a visitor in Mansfield.

Charles H. Voegele went to New York to attend meeting of Scottish Rite Masons.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edis L. Yarger, 22 Chestnut street.

Mildred Conley, Helen McKinley and Lucile Hout went to Oxford to enter Miami university.

Irving Fisher, political economist, spoke at First Presbyterian church in favor of U. S. participation in the League of Nations.

Miss Corrine I. Douglass and Rev. Herbert S. Sidener were married in Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland.

Wedding anniversary party was given for Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Olson.

Warning to Women

EVERY prosperous and successful husband is expected to give The Little Woman credit. If he doesn't, nine times out of ten she takes it anyway.

If I were a man nothing would make me more furious than to have my wife make such a statement. And if I had a husband who admitted that I'd made a man of him I'd give him to the first junk dealer.

Mind you I'm all for husbands loving and appreciating their wives and being duly grateful for their priceless services, but I do not believe that any wife ever "made a man" out of her husband. And I cannot see why any self-respecting male should say she did.

Marriage is a fine institution.

We can do much for each other as husbands and wives. We can help and encourage, comfort and strengthen each other. But we cannot MAKE EACH OTHER. Self-development is a solo job, both before and after marriage. We are individuals before we face the altar, and we remain individuals afterward. And as individuals we stand or fall by our own efforts.

It is easy enough to see why this must be true. Of what use is my character unless it is my own based on my own strength the result of my own decisions? Of no use—and utterly unreliable.

One may make fairly successful imitations of almost anything else on earth except a human being. But the moment a human being stops Being Himself and becomes a synthetic reproduction of someone else's state of mind, that moment he's ready for the discard.

But one sees men whose wives have done everything for them. One does, indeed. One also sees jelly beans, cup custards, wet worms and other spineless messes. But the gent who allows the Dear Little Woman to do that to him certainly shouldn't boast about it. Nor should the Dear Little Woman, unless she's completely cuckoo, desire to claim credit.

No man with a smitch of spunk or self-respect willingly hands his life over to his wife to mold, however much he may love or admire her.

She may be both brighter and better than he is, and he may frankly admit it. She may be able to do much more for him than he could do for himself. NEVERTHELESS, HE WANTS TO DO HIS OWN TINKERING ON HIMSELF.

The desire to Be Himself and develop his own life is the deepest and most sacred impulse in every human being. It is the thing which makes him a man instead of a turnip. And any wise wife, who really loves her husband, will respect that desire. She would prefer to have him MAKE HIMSELF into an honest ditch digger rather than permit her to mold him into A MASTER MIND even if she were able.

There's nothing more dangerous in our modern world, or more menacing to the home, than this feminist notion that successful men get that way because of some woman. And there's nothing more pitiful or contemptible than the sight of some big hairy, two-fisted male admitting it's so.

For the woman who believes she has Made Her Man invariably despises him because he let her. And the man who admits she did, hates her because of it. God made men to be men—and women to keep hands off.

All of which will make a lot of ladies mad enough to eat wooly worms. But it's the truth, girls—and some day, if we keep on meddling where we don't belong, we're going to be mighty sorry that it is. So why pick on me, just because I warned you?

Summary of Week's Happenings

Week Sees Allies Start Bloody Battle of Europe on Italian Soil

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE five day lag between Italy's surrender and the announcement was to allow time for D-day.

"You can't hit a home run by bunting," General Eisenhower had commented, and for D-day was scheduled a landing near Naples to cut off the Germans being hammered northward by General Montgomery's British Eighth army.

As the U. S. Fifth army approached Salerno where its landing was to take place, Gen. Mark W. Clark announced that Italy had given up. Toughened U. S. fighters in the transports feared they had lost some of the honor of being the first U. S. force to invade the continent.

But the Germans had anticipated their coming. Panzer veterans were solidly entrenched with artillery and tanks.

It was no picnic.

Bloody Salerno.

Carving out a slender beachhead before dawn, the Americans found themselves under heavy fire of enemy 88's on the steep heights dominating the area. German tank attacks were beaten off and soon Allied armor began to make its weight felt. Still the Nazis held the advantage. "Bloody" Salerno developed into the bitterest fighting of the Mediterranean campaign. Not since Gallipoli in World War I had Allied landing forces faced such odds.

The town of Salerno changed hands several times. Handicapped by lack of fighter bases nearby, the Allies counted heavily on bombers to hold back German reinforcements, while new equipment and more men were brought ashore.

Meanwhile, to the south, British troops continued their advance up the toe of the Italian boot, captured Taranto and Brindisi. Then they pushed northward to join the counterattacking Fifth army.

More of Rommel's Nazi veterans were also converging on Naples to throw their weight into the Salerno battle. It appeared Hitler had decided to fight for Europe in southern Italy.

Finally, on Friday—the day after the Americans at last broke the German lines—Montgomery's Eighth army and the battle-toughened American Fifth joined, and the Germans were in a tough spot.

How many Germans were in Italy was an open question. Secretary of War Stimson estimated between 180,000 and 300,000, many of them occupied north of the Po where the big industrial towns had been seized. Later estimates gave the Nazis much larger forces.

New Guinea Victory.

Last fall the Japanese Papuan army was driven back across the New Guinea Owen Stanley mountains, beaten in the Buna sector in January. Allied chiefs then faced the problem of how to strike at Lae, main enemy base in northeastern New Guinea.

Surrounded by jungle-clad mountains, on an inlet of Huon gulf, Lae was well protected. Eighteen miles along the shore to the south it was guarded by the outpost of Salamaua, itself a threat to the Allied positions.

Salamaua then became marked for early capture. The enemy strongly reinforced it from the main base farther north.

Lae, itself, however, was weakened. In March a 22-ship convoy met destruction in an attempt to bring new troops and supplies. Allied air superiority sealed it off during the summer.

During the week, with the entire Lae-Salamaua area encircled by Allied troops after a daring amphibious and sky landing, the U. S.-Australian forces of General MacArthur closed in on Salamaua. Its airport was seized; the base itself gave up next day.

Japanese survivors fell back on Lae. But there the trap held firm and its capture, too, became imminent.

Shifting Balances.

Dominant air power brought victory in New Guinea. It was further demonstrated by the fourth U. S. raid on Paramushiro, great enemy base north of Japan. Aleutian-based bombers, during the week, wrecked ground installations and at least five ships.

New action in the Pacific and Indian oceans was promised by a British decision to send several of its most powerful fleet units to that theater from the Mediterranean following surrender of Italy's navy.

At Home

New Horizons.

When the 78th congress recessed last July it had waded through a welter of home-front problems: price-control, labor legislation, pay-as-you-go taxes. During the week its members returned to Washington, found broader horizons on the agenda.

House consideration of America's role in obtaining "a just and lasting peace" loomed as its first major task.

Congress' vacation had seen important developments on the international scene. War victories, the Quebec talks had found expression in such manifestos as the Republican Mackinac statement and mass meetings for the Fulbright resolution.

Two of the leading administration spokesmen added their voices to the growing demand for a more forthright commitment from America's legisators, who after the last war reneged on the League of Nations.

In his first major speech in more than a year Secretary of State Cordell Hull pictured a post-war world of good neighbors ready to crack down on warmakers as the aim of American foreign policy.

"Readiness to use force, if necessary, for the maintenance of peace is indispensable," Hull emphasized in calling also for "an international court of justice" to handle international disputes of a legal sort.

Two days before, Vice President Henry A. Wallace told a "Win the Peace" rally at Chicago that unless the peace guarantees seven freedoms "to the common man everywhere," it will soon be followed by revolution and war.

Proposing "democracy first" as a new slogan for the peace conference, he assailed isolationism as "the screen behind which special privilege seeks to entrench its control."

Administration opposition to congressional draft-restraining moves presaged one of the first fights in the senate.

Dave Boone Says:

Nothing is harder to take than the yarn the Mussolini is free but won't talk. Benito, of all people.

* * *

Of course, it may be that Hitler hasn't found the right balcony for him yet.

* * *

Berlin says that our side had it all set to ship Mussolini to America and that he was scheduled to reach New York just about now. That's silly. Our zoo isn't that hard up for specimens.

* * *

We've all been so absorbed in our own desperate crisis at Salerno that we have failed to notice that the Russians are still walloping Hitler's super race, but whenever and wherever the Nazis fall back it's never a defeat. It's just eluding the enemy according to plan.

It Says Here:

—By D. K. W.

GRADUALLY the problems that are going to confront the men who sit at the peace table are taking shape. Besides getting people fed, the one big question upon which everything else will hinge is: "Who wants what?"

* * *

That's getting clearer now. China wants Manchuria, Formosa, and probably Korea. Russia certainly expects to get Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia and probably considerable more territory in eastern Europe. England wants back everything she had. And we'll probably want some Pacific islands as outposts against any future Japanese menace.

* * *

On top of that, everybody's going to want rights for air trade routes. When you know what a man wants, you can begin to bargain with him. You can expect the dickering to start at any minute—behind the scenes, of course.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Emperor Domitan of Rome was assassinated, Sept. 18, 96 A. D. Its timely to recall him and his end. He was one of the earlier dictators and he, too, had to live his life in fear of assassination and sudden termination of his power.

Quotes

Rep. William T. Byrne (D-N. Y.): "Nobody back home was angry about anything. Everybody was busy with war work. They all seemed pleased with the way the war is going, and all they wanted was to get on with it."

OWI Chief Elmer Davis: "We may . . . see a phoney revolution in Germany by a sham opposition—by Nazi leaders or by military leaders who would be willing to cut the throats of their associates if they could thereby save not only their own necks but the substance of German military or industrial power."

Italians, was overthrown. The world was left to wonder just what had become of old Musso.

In fragments, during the week, his adventures became known.

Benito Mussolini was seized, said an Italian officer to Allied newspapermen, after calling on the king.

Rescuing Romeo.

After that, according to Berlin, the conqueror of Ethiopia was confined on a 9,500-foot plateau in the mountainous Abruzzie Molise department east of Rome.

There Adolf Hitler's parachutists found him a few days ago, though one-third of the rescuers "fell into an abyss and have not been seen since," as the German radio put it.

Mussolini was taken to a (mysteriously) "big city"—presumably Berlin, elevated to new honors as head of the Italian Fascist National government.

Believe It or Not.

Berlin said that in Rome at midnight stood "thousands of faithful to the Fascist regime with lifted heads under the historic balcony on the Piazza Venezia." Berlin didn't explain how the faithful got away with it, in view of the 8 p. m., curfew clamped on Rome by the German military authorities.

They had an explanation, though, for the fact that Mussolini, as chief of resurgent Fascismo, had not addressed his people by radio.

In Short

Executed: In Germany, for "defeatism" and making disruptive statements about the war, three Germans.

Awarded: The national service flag for outstanding war production, to 15 prisons.

Died: In London, Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, limelight-shunning wife of the famous playwright.

Joined: The United Nations in brief ceremony at Washington, Iran, formerly fabled Persia.

Observed: In a Washington hospital by Gen. John J. Pershing, leader of the A.E.F. in World War I, his 83rd birthday.

Appointed: By the central executive committee of the Kuomintang, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as president of China.

Captured: Off the coast of Brazil by a U. S. Navy plane, Capt.-Lieut. Friedrich Guggenberger, U-boat skipper once decorated for sinking the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal.

Musso the Mystery Man.

On July 25 Benito Mussolini, aging Duce of the badly-mauled Italians, was overthrown. The world was left to wonder just what had become of old Musso.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Bad News

HE LEFT around the first of May," the old father said. "I remember well how green the grass was on the lawn, how sweet the air was filled with apple bloom. Wild crab trees were red with bursting buds. The hills within the narrow valley to the west were purple with forget-me-nots.

"He was only 22, tall and strong, and never feared to go, although I know he could hardly leave just then, because the best part of the spring was yet to come. He loved the season of the year when mother worked the garden—then he was never very far away. Yet now, perhaps, he will never come again.

"The letter was thin, when the telegram came. It 'regretted to inform' us that our son had been missing in action since the middle of August. Just like a bomb had dropped into our kitchen, it was. So very near the war in Europe has seemed ever since!

"In his last letter, dated August first, he said the squadron he was part of was on a dangerous mission. He was a pilot of one of those big bombers. He was only 22. He loved to fly and I never knew him to stint a duty that he believed to be his own.

"Now every bomber that we see fly across our skies we faintly hope may be our son coming home, but down deep in our hearts we fear we will never experience such a meeting here on earth. There still is hope, the neighbors say—and we bless them for it.

"He had been based in England, and his squadron had made many missions over the continent. But the last flight, we learned was over Essen when the Germans put up their stiffest resistance.

"We have been so proud of that blue star for nearly two years. It will break our hearts to place a gold one there. And Mom and I won't do it until we have to give up all hope.

"When the war is over, and the boys come home, maybe they can tell us more than we know now."

HAILS FALL OF LAE AS STRIDE TO PHILIPPINES

M'Arthur Says 'We Are Making Our Way Back' as Troops Take Bastion.

repeated air blows—the last made Thursday morning with 43 tons of bombs and 30,000 rounds of machinegun fire that finished off the last enemy resistance.

A front dispatch said the Lae airfield could be used at once by the Allies although wreckage of 15 to 20 enemy planes lay in the area. The only living Japanese left at Lae, the report added, were a small and subdued group of prisoners.

The 12-day battle was said to have set a record for jungle fighting. Unshaven, mud-caked Australian troops raced down the Markham river valley to enter the town, after asking American bombers to stop their attacks so they could do in.

The remnants of the Japanese force, once estimated at 20,000 men, refused to make a death stand in the base they had held 18 months and struck out for the 14,000-foot mountains to the north where Allied troops already blocked the last trails.

The captured area contains possibly four airfields and stretches some 21 miles above Lae to Salamaua, about 25 airline miles to the southwest which fell several days ago.

Allied bombers already were working up the New Guinea coast, hitting Alexinshafen, northwest of Lae, with 61 tons of bombs in the latest series of attacks.

Fleets of Allied heavy and medium bombers of all types from Liberators to Dauntless dive bombers hammered the Buin-Faisi airdromes at Bougainville island, in the northern Solomons, ceaselessly all day Wednesday for the second straight day. They shot down 34 enemy planes.

A dispatch from South Pacific headquarters said that despite their losses, the Japanese were bringing up aerial reinforcements and their strength probably was as great now as two weeks ago.

The South Pacific spokesman said 2,136 enemy planes had been shot down in the Solomons area the last year—690 since the current offensive began on June 30—for a better than four to one ratio compared to Allied losses.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS HOLD RALLY MONDAY

Dr. Albert G. Gage to Address Banquet Session at First Methodist Church.

Dr. Albert H. Gage, serving interim pastorate, South Hills Baptist church, Cleveland, will be the guest speaker at the annual city-wide Sunday School Officers' and Teachers' banquet and fellowship meeting to be held Monday at 6:30 p. m. at the First Methodist church. About 200 are expected.

The rally is for pastors and Sunday school workers for all churches throughout the city. Robert Hoover, president of the Sunday School Superintendents' association will preside. A songfest will be in charge of A. Lemoine Derr.

Dr. Gage will speak on "The Pastor Looks at His Sunday School." He has written and published two books, "How to Increase Church School Attendance" and "How to Increase Church Attendance."

ST. MATTHEW'S LUTHERAN

Rev. Charles F. Sheriff will speak Sunday morning on "The Rivers of the Bible." This is one of a series of sermons on this subject.

Rev. Sheriff will attend the central conference of the Synod of Ohio at Millersburg Monday and Tuesday. He will serve as chairman of the committee on Evangelism.

Choir rehearsal will be held Thursday evening.

The annual congregational social and devotional meeting will be held Friday evening in the church parlors. A covered-dish dinner will be served and song service conducted by Ray Bush. Reports will be given at that time by all of the organizations of the church. There will also be election of officers for the Sunday school and church.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN

Outlining viewpoints and attitudes which must prevail in a post-war world, Rev. Herman L. Gilbert will speak Sunday at 10:30 a. m. on the subject, "Learning the Mind of Christ For Today." The three divisions of the children of the church will work during the worship period under the direction of Mrs. E. G. Pankow, Mrs. Glenn Miller and Mrs. Gilbert Schneider. The nursery program will also be in operation.

Rev. Gilbert will attend the central conference convention Monday and Tuesday which will be held in the Millersburg Lutheran church.

Teachers and officers of the Sunday school will hold a work meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. in the church parlors in preparation for promotion and rally days Sept. 26 and Oct. 3.

Members of the senior choir will rehearse Friday at 7 p. m.

Mrs. William Bolley will speak before the adult Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., presenting the monthly missionary topic on Dr. Anna Kugler, medical missionary.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

At the First Christian church Sunday morning, Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger will preach on the theme, "A Religion You Can't Steal."

On Sunday evening at 7:30, the Service Men's organization will have its first meeting of the year. This is for the families and friends of the church's 110 men who are in the armed forces. W. W. Hammett, president, will have charge of the worship and hymn service. Letters from the men will be read and the Bible school orchestra will furnish special music.

On Thursday at 6:30 p. m. there will be a fall retreat for the 125 officers and leaders of the church organizations. It will be a covered dish dinner. The Loyal Women's class will have charge of the tables.

Rev. Hagelbarger will present plans for the church program, M. D. Miller, superintendent, will outline Bible School plans, and Mrs. Charles Ray will speak of the Young People's program.

CHURCH OF NAZARENE

Members and friends of the Church of the Nazarene, 105 Reba avenue, will celebrate the third anniversary of the opening of the new church auditorium. A Sunday school rally will begin the activities for the day.

The rally will open at 9:30 a. m. with Robert Wallace, superintendent, in charge. Rev. George McElvain of Carthage, O., will be the speaker at the morning service.

Rev. McElvain formerly lived in Mansfield, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McElvain reside at 551 Wayne avenue.

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Gullett, of Mt. Vernon, will sing.

A "Hoss Race?" . . . Well I Guess!

Come Over and Pick the Wrong Horse. Most Everyone Does!

BOOK REVIEW

Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek by Basil Miller, is a biography of today's outstanding Christian personalities, who have gained the respect, admiration, and confidence of leaders in all parts of the world. The author places strong emphasis on their conversion experiences and their consecrated spiritual lives revealing what Christ means to them in leading a "heathen" country.

SELF DOMINATION

The home is God's training camp where a small group learn to live together so well that there is laid a foundation for a larger group found in town, state, and nation.

The totalitarian state is a national expression of homes where one member dominates. E. Stanley Jones says that the domination of one person in a home is fatal, for it begets the same thing in others thus setting the stage for clash and strife.

Self-surrender of each member of the family for the general good of all is the way to avoid home totalitarianism. In self-surrender there is an attitude of mind that helps one to see the truth in the other's position rather than always to be trying to get one's own position across.

Loveless giving is lifeless giving.

If you are perfectly sure of your own truthfulness, you can sometimes be accused of an untruth without flying into a rage.

Most people prefer to have their difficulties regarded as due to causes rather than to sins.—Prof. W. E. Hocking.

Ambition for world conquest is the most insidious poison any nation can imbibe.—Dr. F. F. Goodsell.

We are not destroying churches by antagonism in America, as they do in some other countries, but many of them are being destroyed by our inertia, indifference and inactivity.

As in Mathematics the solution of a problem must be all right or it is considered wrong, so in the matter of the intention of the heart there is no place for degrees of righteousness Honesty is absolute; the moment a little dishonesty is allowed the mixture is no longer honest, it is wrong. Purity is absolute; the moment a little impurity is mixed with the pure, the mixture becomes impure.

WIT AND WISDOM

A friend of mine attended his old home church that was struggling for its existence. The minister's sermon was dry; the congregation was small and not cordial; and the atmosphere lacked the spirit of worship. A member of the church asked another the question, "Why do you suppose he came here to church?"

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I gratefully followed Mary's advice to "relax and go into the silences" for I knew that I must have time if my "glimmering" of an idea were to grow into a light sufficient to make clear the personal for Marion in the newspapers.

"How will this do?" I asked at last, and Mary poised her pencil, ready for dictation.

"'Your new agent is good salesman'," I dictated. "'Keep him on. I will be able to have frequent contact with him, and he will advise me immediately of any new development. Pack carefully the contents of your next shipment. We shall be watching for it day and night at the factory from which your message came. Be ready to deliver it at a second's notice'."

I stopped and looked at Mary, whose flying fingers had kept pace with my purposely slow dictation.

"Does this strike you at all favorably?" I asked, hesitatingly.

Her eyes, lifted to mine, were dancing with enthusiasm.

"And you're supposed to have a vocabulary!" she gibed. "'Favorably!' What a word! That message strikes me so hard it's raising welts where it hit! The thing's a wow! Just wait till Grandpa Spencer hears it. I'll bet he gets contusions, too."

"Let's us hope so," I said, laughing. Then I became serious again.

Concluding the Message.

"I suppose we had better finish with the assurance Marion herself worked out so long: 'Keep the chin up!' and 'Remember I am on the job!' meaning exactly what they say."

Mary already was writing words down, but she nodded emphatic agreement.

"Surest thing you know," she assented, and then she put down her pencil, and held out the sheet of paper to me.

"Better check on it and see if I've caught every comma," she said.

"It's a waste of time, knowing you," I said, smiling at her, and she sprang up and sank to the floor in an exaggerated curtsy.

"Merci for the laurel wreath!" she said, and then, sitting down again she waited until I looked up from the paper and pronounced judgment.

"Every 'i' dotted, and 't' crossed," I told her, and she gave a realistic sigh of relief.

"Okay! What's the next step?"

"I don't know," I said doubtfully.

An Impish Suggestion.

"Perhaps we take a nap?" She looked at me with such impish hopefulness that I laughed outright.

"I'm sorry to dampen your hopes but I don't think that's indicated," I told her. "I think I had better telephone Father, and let him know we have finished our work. He may want to get hold of the man who attends to putting these in the papers."

"He probably has that man hotfooting it over here right now," Mary said dryly.

Her prophecy was fulfilled almost before she had finished it, for the sound of the shrilling telephone in her sitting room put a period to her sentence, and we both started for the door. Noel turned from the telephone at our entrance.

"Message for you, Aunt Madge, from the Chief," he said, and crossing the room rapidly, I took up the receiver.

Her Father's Voice.

"Margaret?" my father's voice said incisively.

"Yes. I was just about to call you."

"Oh, then you have finished." The implication was plain that he would have been displeased had I interrupted him for any other reason.

"Yes. Everything we could do. We're waiting for your verdict."

"Good! I'll be over immediately. Good bye!"

"Good bye!" I replaced the receiver, and Ronald loked up nervously from the letter to Carolyn which he was writing in accordance with my father's instructions, and which, judging from the harassed look on his face was not progressing to his satisfaction.

"He's coming over now?" he asked, and there was distinct dismay in his voice.

Gamma Beta's Have Meeting

The regular meeting of the Gamma Beta Gamma club was held at the home of Miss Marjorie Sheehe, Wayne street, last evening when plans were made to buy a $50 war bond during the third War loan drive.

Plans were also made to have a hike and a breakfast Oct. 10.

Prizes for the evening were won by Miss June Bell and Miss Betty Edmonstone. The next meeting will be held in the form of a picnic supper at 6:30 at the home of Miss Ettabell Hunter, Mulberry street, in honor of the new pledges of the club.

Honor Bride at Lodge Meeting

The Royal Neighbors of America held their regular meeting at the Eagle hall Thursday evening with Mary McMullen in charge of the business session.

Following the meeting a party was given in honor of Mrs. Lou Whitaker, the former Dona Dockerty, recorder of the camp, who was recently married.

The bride was presented with a lovely chenille bedspread from the lodge members. When luncheon was served, the refreshment table was centered with a wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The next regular meeting will be held Oct. 21 at the Eagle hall.

Heroine of Two Wars Is Off to Africa

By ADELAIDE KERR

(AP Features Writer)

NEW YORK — Florence Conrad is ready to leave for Africa and points north to head a group of crack women ambulance drivers attached to the French army.

The group will drive American gift ambulances and will be known as the Rochambeau Unit. Mrs. Conrad, who has spent the last two years in New York, will be its Field Director.

"Our duties will be evacuating wounded or sick civilians according to the needs of the time," she told me. "If we are sent to the firing line to transport soldiers, we'll do it."

Firing line talk coming from Mrs. Conrad is no hot air. She spent some months on the French firing line in 1940. She ran six canteens at the French front, served as an ambulance driver, was decorated with the Croix de Guerre, cited five times for bravery and captured by the Germans. Florence Conrad may well emerge from the present conflict with a war record matched in kind by no other woman.

When we were discussing her new assignment, she said:

"The French Military Mission is sending the ambulance group to Africa. The twenty ambulances are really a gift from the American people. The money to pay for them came on request, from the American National War Fund. One of the War Fund's participants, you know, is the French Relief Fund, whose members include the Fighting French and the Coordinating Council of French Relief Societies.

"The French Military Mission also selected and trained here twenty French women drivers. Two more women drivers for each car will be selected in Africa. I report to French general headquarters in Algiers and our unit will be attached to the French Army."

Florence Conrad, who is a widow and a grandmother, stands for the new type of women produced by the twentieth century. She wears her civilian clothes like a French marquise and her war-time driving gloves with equal ease. She is as hard to scare as an army sergeant and said to be cool as an ice pack under fire.

Although she is Chicago born, she grew up in Paris and spent all her adult life there. During the first World war she was head nurse attached to four different French hospitals—one of them a tent hospital at the front. When the second World war broke out in 1939 she organized the only group of private canteens in the war zone and ran six on the Maginot Line.

When the fighting started Mrs. Conrad was in the thick of the fray. She used her cars as ambulances and (attached to the 36th Division at her request) shuttled the wounded from the firing line to field hospitals. She drove for days without sleep in the ceaseless din of bombardment, and was under fire. Her car was shot full of holes, but she escaped unhurt. When the 36th joined in the terrible retreat she went with them, evacuating wounded. She was caught four times and escaped, but was finally captured when the 36th was surrounded, and was placed in a prison camp at Luneville with 50,000 men. Eventually she talked her way out and drove back to Paris.

remain in his post until this fall.

Meanwhile, reports were current in diplomatic circles that a meeting of American, British and Soviet representatives may be held in North Africa within the next few weeks.

It is believed this meeting would deal with establishment of the Allied Mediterranean commission. This commission is being formed to give Russia direct representation in the Anglo-American policy discussions concerning political problems affecting the Mediterranean area.

The Russians were not invited to participate in the early stages of the Anglo-American planning for the Allied military government in Italy. Although there is reason to believe this was due to an oversight rather than any deliberate desire to exclude Russia, the Soviets resented it. The Mediterranean commission is intended to correct the situation, and assure close cooperation between the three major Allied powers in planning future political moves in that area.

One of the problems to be considered by the Mediterranean commission will be the future treatment of Italy, including the question of with whom the Allies should deal after the Germans have been driven out of that country.

The North African meeting is expected to be followed by a conference of high ranking representatives of the three powers in Moscow next month. This meeting originally was intended to be on the level of foreign ministers, but it now appears fairly definite that Secretary of State Cordell Hull will not attend. It is thought that the air travel involved would prove too fatiguing for the secretary. If Hull does not go to Mossow, he is likely to leave Washington for a few weeks' rest.

There are persistent reports that W. Averell Harriman, lend-lease coordinator in London and one of President Roosevelt's advisers on Russia, will represent the United States either at the North African or the Moscow meeting. Harriman has been in almost daily consultation with state department experts on Russian matters.

Biscuit Mix.

1⅔ cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
⅝ teaspoons salt
⅓ cup lard or meat drippings.

Sift flour once, measure and sift again with baking powder, and salt. Cut in lard until mixture has fine, even crumbs, then add the milk given in pie recipe, and pour over hot meat.

Sponge Pudding.

1 tablespoon butter
½ cup flour
¼ cup sugar
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon baking powder
3 eggs, beaten separately

Mix sugar and flour, wet with some cold milk and stir into the 2 cups milk, which have been heated to boiling, stirring until thick and smooth; add butter and beaten yolks. When cool add baking powder and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in pudding dish set in a pan of hot water, from 25 to 30 minutes in 350 degree oven. Serve with creamy sauce.

French Dressing.

2 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tbsps. vinegar or lemon juice

Mix and put in glass jar in refrigerator. Shake well before serving. If you substitute lemon juice for vinegar, lessen the amount of sugar if you find the 2 tablespoons too sweet.

Drive Ahead From Salerno Bridgehead as Germans Admit Sharp Attacks.

enemy positions in the hills behind the shore.

Reported officially still firmly holding the initiative, the Fifth army has regained all ground lost to the Germans earlier this week and now is moving across fresh territory.

Only in the north, particularly around Salerno, were the invaders meeting heavy resistance. To the south, the Nazi command appeared to be pulling back its forces for defense of an west-east line from Salerno to a point north of British-held Bari on the east coast.

American Flying Fortresses and medium bombers from the northwest African Air forces struck out ahead of the advancing armies to pound enemy airfields at Ciampino and Prattica di Mare south of Rome, destroying many aircraft on the ground.

Other planes blasted and strafed enemy troops on roads around the battle zone and maintained patrol over the battle area.

An air communique disclosed that Allied fighters and fighter-bombers now were operating from airfields on the Italian mainland, enabling them to increase their already record aerial umbrella over the ground forces.

For the third straight day, the Allied air squadrons failed to encounter any enemy planes, available Axis air strength being concentrated in intermittent small-scale effort against shipping.

Two enemy planes were shot down off Salerno Thursday night, while three Allied planes were lost during the 24 hours ended.

Once again American Liberator bombers from the Middle-Eastern command joined in the aerial offensive, putting highway and railroad junctions out of action in a heavy raid on Pescara, on the Italian east coast 115 miles north of Naples.

Bridges across the Pescara river were hit and a large oil fire was started.

British Liberators and Halifaxes, also from the Middle-Eastern command, raided enemy communications at Potenza, about 75 miles southeast of Naples, Thursday night.

Reynolds Packard, United Press correspondent with the Fifth army, reported in a dispatch dated yesterday that three important towns were captured or re-captured during the day, while Americans in one sector alone of the 26-mile-long beachhead took 150 prisoners and knocked out six half tracks and five tanks.

British units of the Fifth army penetrated more than two miles into fresh territory, Packard said.

William Munday, another correspondent with the Fifth army, said four wooded hills were among the most bitterly-contested objectives on the British-held front. Nicknamed Crucifix, White Cross, Pimple and Snout, they changed hands as often as twice a day.

British Commandos scaled Pimple and killed a number of Germans in addition to capturing 147, including the battalion commander.

The Germans were expected to concentrate the main weight of their attack against the northern end of the bridgehead in an attempt to inflict as much damage as possible before the Eighth army can contribute its full strength to the campaign. Early contact between the Fifth and Eighth armies was only by patrols.

Balkan Fuse of Revolt Sputters

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The fuse of revolt is sputtering in the Balkans. A violent and destructive outburst against German domination is considered here to be a virtual certainty in the immediate future.

This view is based on President Roosevelt's unqualified appeal to the people of Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria to rise against Nazi dominance and destroy it in a "consuming fire."

The president said he had received reliable information that there is "definite unrest and a growing desire for peace" on the part of Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary and also on the part of Finland, on the northern flank of Europe.

In view of recent Allied warnings to the Balkan peoples not to strike prematurely, the president's statement in his war message to congress yesterday suggested the possibility that the hour for another Anglo-American thrust into Adolf Hitler's continental fortress is fast approaching.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DEEP FINESSES MARKED

You always seem like a hero to the general run of kibitzers when you get away with the deep finesse of a spot card. There is nothing fancy about that at all, however when it is marked clearly by the bidding, the opening lead or some play, as is the case on many occasions. Then failure to take deep finesse would come from inability to read the situation or else unwillingness to expend the slight energy necessary to figure it out.

South got a clear reading of his problem as soon as he saw the opening lead of the club J on this deal. That is, he did unless West was working some kind of a flim-flam on him. For the J is not led conventionally unless the 10 is also held, plus the A, K, 9 or 8. Of course, in this case the lead might have been because West thought North had opened with a short club suit, but South decided it probably was from four clubs the J-10-9 and another, possibly two other cards.

So he let it run to his A, seeing four club trick in sight by means of the 8 finesse and a four spade tricks, plus the chance of one with the heart K. To the second trick he led his 3 out of 3. The A was held up and the K won. To his hand South came with the spade Q and led the club 3. If West split his 10-9, the K could have won, the spade J could have been a re-entry for another club lead and thus both hostile club honors could have been trapped. West, however, played his 4 on the 3 lead, so the club 8 was finessed. When that was done, there was nothing to the rest of the hand except to run the rest of the needed nine tricks.

What kind of situation is the principal one in which a player should refrain from making a business or penalty double of a contract which he feels sure he can defeat?

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Sept. 19.

Sunday's horoscope is a most propitious one for all manner of spiritual, mystical and intellectual vocations and avocations. It is an excellent time for study, meditation, research and all serious and progressive pursuits. Matters of public interest should be forwarded, travel, writings encouraged. But in social, domestic or romantic affiliations the signs are not harmonious.

Those whose birthday it is are under a decidedly encouraging rule, with all the intellectual, business financial and creative faculties under high stimuli for success and progress. Direct attack as well as finesse may be used to good advantage. But romance, social and domestic affiliations may be difficult because of unstrained impulses and emotions. Be calm and collected.

A child born on this day should have fine intellectual powers, with keen insight, intuition as well as shrewd and analytical qualities, making for outstanding success. Its personal happiness may suffer from its lack of emotional discipline.

For Monday, Sept. 20.

Monday's astrological forecast points to a period of trial and error, in which time should be taken to analyze, revise and attack with energy and shrewdness. Use quiet and restraint where the impulse is toward strife, tempest and excitement. Under such stress relax, seek diversion or enjoyment, especally with the young.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a year in which obstacles, delays, restrictions and depressions threaten defeat unless rigorous effort toward correcting mistakes and attacking impediments is used. The tendency to fly off the handle in defeat, to act impulsively and recklessly, may but accent the dangers.

A child born on this day should have much skill and mentality to attain success, but its conflicting traits of character need direction. Its impetuous nature is offset by serious, reserved and depressing states of mind.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Vic Dorris, football coach of Marion Harding high school, has this in common with other gridiron mentors: He's a cagy gent.

A week ago, after watching his first team run wild over his second stringers 59-0, Dorris gave out the opinion that his Presidents would have to improve 50 per cent to beat Mansfield tonight.

Now, after a week of practice, Dorris reports his heroes have improved 25 per cent.

Leaving the usual margin of doubt.

It's been so long since Mansfield and Marion have tangled on the gridiron, the days of Tyger competition in the North Central Ohio league, that all the two teams know about each other before tonight's imbroglio is hearsay, and what they've read in the papers.

But this much Mansfield fans should be sure of. Marion, year in and year out, should prove a tougher opening assignment for the Tygers than was Akron West. And there have been times when West was tough enough. Last year the Tygers won in the last six minutes of play on two long runs by Roland Schmidt.

Coaching conditions are much better in Marion than in the Akron schools, and Dorris has a chance to build himself a system which would be impossible in the Rubber City.

The Mansfield-Marion rivalry is now the oldest one on the Tyger schedule, going back to Mansfield's first year in football, 1899, when the game broke up in an argument over officiating after 18 minutes of play with Mansfield leading 5-0.

There was a long stretch from 1917 through 1930 when Marion gave the Tygers all they could handle. There were five tie games in that string, with Mansfield winning three, and Marion four games.

* * *

Then Russ Murphy's powerhouse, which got too strong for the N. C. O., started rolling, taking the Prexies for six easy victories, winding up with a 53-0 slaughter in 1936.

Punchless Tribe Loses to Tigers

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Pitching may be 75 per cent of a team's strength but with the Cleveland Indians it's just a thankless job.

Allie Reynolds fanned 12 Detroit batters last night and allowed one earned run but the Tigers beat him 2 to 1 because the Indians displayed their usual reluctance to score.

The Tribesmen had men on bases in every inning but in order to produce their lone tally in the seventh Paul (Dizzy) Trout had to issue two walks, allow an infield hit, make an error and uncork a wild pitch.

The Redskin's 25-year-old fireballer had a two-hit shutout going into the ninth but singles by Dick Wakefield, Joe Wood and Jimmy Outlaw deadlocked the count and Wood raced home with the winning marker when Oris Hockett bobbled Outlaw's safety.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK —(AP)— Taking a peep at a couple of service grid squads that likely will be worth watching this season. . . . The Naval air technical training center at Memphis, Tenn., has come up with the best nickname—"Memphis Blues" . . . but there's not much chance that Coach Denny Myers, recently of Boston college, will be singing them. . . . At fullback, for instance, Lieut. Myers has Ens. Frank Filchock of Indiana and the Redskins, Chief Petty Officer Jim Thibaut of Tulane, Seaman Arsen Michaelian of Detroit U. and Marine Harold Miles of the U. of Washington frosh. . . . He also has one of the toughest schedules you ever saw. . . . The Camp Davis, N. C., anti-aircraft center also has some pretty good players, including Corp. Johnny Mellus, ex-Villanova and pro Giants tackle, and Lieut. Tom Glass, former star Tulane ball carrier. . . . On the other hand, Keesler Field, Miss., will have only two post teams playing each other and Camp Croft, S. C., is going in for touch football this season.

(Putting over a third strike on the World Series third sackers): Bill Johnson, Yankees—New York and Connie Mack's choice for rookie of the year honors. . . . A good .290 hitter who has driven in 92 runs and a durable player who never misses game.

When Coach Jess Neely of Rice told Houston football fans that he was "starting from scratch" to prepare for the season, Dutch Meyer of Texas Christian added that he was "scratching to start."

Georgia Wins With 4-F Club

College Game Really Gets Under Way Today.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK—(AP)—Georgia, bereft of every player that brought it to the Rose Bowl championship on Jan. 1, hurdled its first football obstacle of the present campaign and put it squarely up to Michigan, Purdue, Duke, Iowa pre-flight Villanova and Cornell to do the same today.

Coach Wally Butts smiled with satisfaction last night as his grid infants and 4-F's galloped to a 25 to 7 verdict over a Presbyterian College outfit that belted Fort Jackson, 41 to 0, only a week ago.

The Georgia success was only a warm-up for the season's second football Saturday that has Michigan transporting its collection of stars to Camp Grant, winner last week by a 23 to 0 edge over Illinois; and Purdue visiting Great Lakes.

Those two games would do credit to a November date, and a capacity throng of 7,000 is slated for the Woolverine-Camp Grant affair and 20,000 sailors will be in the stands for the Great Lakes unveiling.

The Iowa Seahawks, tutored this year by Lt. Don Faurot, mix with Illinois, Indiana takes on Miami of Ohio, Washburn plays Kansas under the lights while Wisconsin and Marquette resume their old rivalry in other midwestern games.

Camp LeJeune sends its towering Marines against Duke, regarded by many as the second best team in the south behind Georgia Tech.

Yale and Rochester, a pair of first time winners a week ago, meet.

Cornell's Big Red tests Bucknell. Muhlenberg hopes to right itself against Villanova and the Coast Guard Academy tangles with Bates in other eastern games.

BREWERS CAPTURE ASSOCIATION FLAG

MILWAUKEE —(AP)— Baseball's most colorful combination clicked for the pot of gold last night: the Milwaukee Brewers ended their two-year trek over the rainbow from the American Association's sub-cellar by clinching the pennant.

Their murderers' row—studded by batting champs from almost every minor league in sight—blasted the Brewers from a 7 to 0 deficit to a 12 to 10 victory over Kansas City. It was the payoff decision, putting Milwaukee three and a half games ahead of Indianapolis, with three to go.

Bucks Promised Defensive Drills

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Coach Paul E. Brown today promised his Buck gridders plenty of work on defense during the coming week in final tuneup for the season opener against the Iowa Seahawks next Saturday.

"The offense is still far ahead of the defense," Brown declared after watching the team's second scrimmage yesterday.

"We'll have to give that special attention during the next practices or we won't be able to get our hands on the ball against the Seahawks."

The Buck first stringers overran the No. 3 aggregation 20-0 in the first half of the scrimmage and the No. 2 outfit then piled up a 19-7 score against the No. 3 unit.

Ernie Parks of Canton, state high school sprint champion, scored all three touchdowns for the first team, while Matt Brown, Canton, Jasper Harris, Canton, and Bob Hecker, Olmstead Falls, each scored one for the No. 2's.

The No. 3 score was made on a 55-yard gallop by Paul Davis of Middletown.

Tyger Foes Win Easily

Cline Scores 31 Points For Fredericktown.

Mansfield High's Tigers open their football season tonight at Marion, with these scores of last night's games to think of:

* * *

Massillon 15, Canton Lincoln 0.
Defiance 46, Paulding 9.
Portsmouth 66, Ceredo Kenova 0.
Springfield 20, Columbus West 2.
Elyria 14, Oberlin 6.
Canton McKinley 54, Timken 12.

First named teams in all the above games are future opponents of the Tygers who go to Elyria next Friday night.

Aside from Massillon, all of the Tyger opponents apparently had easy picking, which is something Coach Paul Snyder's Tygers probably will not run into at Marion tonight.

The Tygers leave at 5:30 and the game is scheduled at 8 o'clock.

North Central Ohio league teams generally got away on the right foot yesterday with Ashland taking Willard 13-0 in a close battle, Galion romping over Tiffin Calvert 33-6, and Shelby swamping Norwalk 42-0. Bucyrus was the only loser, dropping a 20-0 decision to Tiffin Columbian

The great Ollie Cline at Fredericktown got away a-running in the race for individual scoring honors of the state as the Freddies chalked up a 61-0 victory over Granville. Cline scored four touchdowns and seven extra points. Dick Kirkpatrick got three touchdowns, and Patsy Shafer and Corky Gregg one each.

* * *

Fredericktown Coach Dick King, former Butler mentor, announced the Freddies have filled home engagements with Madison, Oct. 29, and Mt. Vernon, Oct. 15. They are still seeking a game for Nov. 11.

Salvatore DeVito, Jack Robb and Archie Steele each got a touchdown for Shelby. DeVito having one scoring run of 53 yards, and Steele one of 47.

Galion's touchdown parade was touched off by Henry Stough, who raced 41 yards to score on the last play of the first quarter. Shaffer scored three times and Dougherty once.

Your bait or flyrod should be kept in a good case, to protect it against breakage. A good, serviceable case can be made from a piece of bamboo pole (such as are often found in new rolled rugs.) Cut it off to the required length, then heat a steel rod red hot and burn out the thin separations of wood that occur at the joints. Plugs of wood or cork can be made for the ends, and hooks or eyelets used to hold them in place.

Here's the correct way to put out a camp fire. Stir the coals while soaking them with water. Turn small sticks and drench both sides. Wet the ground around the fire and make sure that the last spark is dead.

Madison Edged By New London 13 to 6

Inexperience Leads to Defeat In Rams' Opening Grid Game.

TWO GREEN football teams tangled in a typical opening game at New London yesterday with Coach Elmer Crabb's New London aggregation edging Coach Jeff DeHaven's new Madison Rams 13-6.

The best that could be said for both teams was that they showed promise of developing into much better gridiron machines before the season is far advanced.

Madison had only two boys on the line who had played football before, and their shortage of manpower, which keeps them from scrimmage practice during the week, showed up in their line play yesterday. New London also had a green line, but it won the ball game by quicker charging.

Madison's line showed improvement late in the game when the crippled Joe Harfman went into the lineup.

Inexperience of the Rams led to both New London touchdowns. The winners got into scoring position both times on an identical play. A Madison lineman was offside as Richards started around left end. The whistle blew, players of both teams pulled up to see what was the matter, and Richards tore off long gains to put the ball near the Madison goal line. Naturally New London took the gain instead of the penalty.

Madison got some measure of revenge by catching New London napping on the bootlegger play for the Rams' only touchdown. The Rams set the play up beautifully, with Bader losing six yards back to the 20 on a reverse. When New London saw what looked like another reverse coming up, they all chased Bader, while Anthony galloped 20 yards for a touchdown with the ball hidden on his hip.

New London scored in the second period with Shire Robinson spinning for 6 yards and a touchdown. Madison tied it up in the third when Anthony returned a punt 30 yards to the New London 14, and then set up the bootlegger.

Back came New London with a drive of four first downs, ending with a three-yard plunge by Robinson for the touchdown. Buzard booted the extra point.

New London recovered a Madison fumble on the 30 following the next kickoff, and threatened throughout the final period, but Madison's line by this

FORWARD EDGE MAINTAINED BY STOCK MARKET

Railroads Need Equipment, Materials, Manpower For Safe Operation.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stocks continued to edge forward in today's early market transactions.

Fractional gainers at an active opening were Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott, American Telephone, Radio Corp., Western Union, J. I. Case, Pennsylvania, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Air Reduction, Goodyear, Great Northern, Chrysler and U. S. Rubber.

Holders of rails studied the warning of the publication "Railway Age" that the carriers "cannot keep physical properties in safe condition or operate them safely without enough equipment, materials or manpower." It disclosed that in the first five months of 1943 volume of freight traffic handled was 24 per cent above 1942 and 72 per cent larger than in the 1941 period. Passenger travel exceeded last year by 95 per cent and the 1941 months by 195 per cent.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Grain futures were firm today at the opening, with the low supplies a stimulating influence. Winnipeg wheat was firm, lending early strength here.

Wheat opened ⅛ off to ¼ up, September $1.48½, December $1.48¾-⅞, oats were unchanged to ⅛ higher, September 77⅝, and rye was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, September $1.05.

THEATERS

Benchley at His Best.

Some of Robert Benchley's funniest dialogues and most effective scenes are said to be in RKO Radio's new filmusical, "The Sky's the Limit" which opened today at the Ohio theater. He plays the part of the millionaire employer of Joan Leslie who yearns to marry her but doesn't quite know how to go about it. Miss Leslie is co-starred with Fred Astaire in the picture which relates the adventures of a fighter pilot on a brief leave in Manhattan. When Astaire decides to have his fun in civilian clothes he gets into a hilarious series of misunderstandings.

Wartime Romance.

A poignant wartime romance is the theme of Universal's "Here to Hold" starting its run today at the Madison theater. Co-starring with Joseph Cotten, Deanna Durbin has her first serious romantic role. Deanna portrays the debutante who adores an Army aviator. The aviator, Joseph Cotten, returns her love but secretly realizes the futility of the attachment. Co-attraction is the Office of War Information release "Report From the Aleutians." It is the technicolor portrayal of men battling the wind and weather to build and fortify a small island, making a base for the constant bombing of Japanese objectives.

FOREIGN POLICY ACCORD SIGHTED

tablished on a permenent basis."

The executive committe of the Pan American union recently made a similar recommendation, saying the system of cooperative action in the mutual relations of the 21 American republics had worked out much better than the system of "universal domain that for so long ruled the world" and the "balance of power" theory of Europe.

The committee said the essence of the good neighbor policy is:

1. Respect for treaty obligations.

2. Non-intervention in the affairs of another state.

3. Condemnation of force and the non-recognition of territory acquired by force.

4. Peaceful settlement of international disputes.

that the agreement proposed for Mansfield is identical with those which the company and other cities have agreed upon in clearing the way for building other airports throughout the nation.

Brehman and Tesky said the $17,000 figure was only an estimate and that a difinite figure will be provided the city as soon as detailed construction plans are worked out. The cost to the city may not be that high, they agreed.

Formal agreements are to be drawn up and submitted for action by city council at an early meeting.

During the session, the airport committee also met with representatives of the Mansfield Telephone company whose lines must also be removed from the site. An exchange station in the port area has to be moved to another location.

L. R. Wittemire, manager, and George McCormick, engineer, told the committee that the Mansfield company has not completed its plans for placing lines underground, but informed the group that work would be speeded and that its re-construction plan would be finished within the next two weeks. Another session of the committee is planned for that time.

George Smith, airport committee chairman, presided at the session. Meeting with the company representatives were J. R. Harrington, airport manager, C. H. Huston, C. H. Henkel, and Leslie K. Wagner of the legal committee. Ray Calene, C. of C. president, John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the C. of C. and Mayor Locke.

city of the Ukraine, on the Dnieper river. Russian forces were reported to have driven a wedge in the German lines that brought them to within 50 miles of Kiev.

A new approach was being developed toward Kiev from south of Priluki. More than 130 villages and towns were liberated from the Nazi yoke in the section east of Kiev within the past 24 hours and upwards of 2,000 Germans were reported to have been wiped out in the violent fighting that is raging in that area.

The district center of Chernukhi province, Losinovka, the district center of Poltava province, Chernukhi, and the large towns of Likhachico, Mrin, Monasyrische, Zaudaika, Yaroshovka, Vilchenkovo, and Tishi, were among inhabited localities captured.

Rich stores of military booty were captured in the drive toward Kiev. At one railway station 53 locomotives and great numbers of cars were taken by the Soviets.

STRIP LAW

Legislators Knock Easy-Money Features From Statute.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The "informer" law, passed during the Civil war and later turned into a neat get-rich-quick scheme by the few who knew its possibilities, is on the way out today in the middle of another war.

The senate passed a bill yesterday knocking out all the "easy money" features of the law. The bill now goes to the house which previously voted to repeal the entire statute.

STUDY APPEAL

Army Officers Re-Consider Action In Rape Case.

MARCH FIELD, Cal. — (U.P.) — Army officers said today the judge advocate general's office was considering the appeal of Pvt. George P. Rimke, Cleveland, O., from a life sentence for raping silent movie actress Lina Basquette.

Rimke maintained he had been denied counsel of a civil attorney. His appeal was filed after he escaped from the Muroc air base guard house and conferred with a lawyer.

The Army has fitted soldiers with shoes ranging in size from 2½ to 18.

Crowd Watching Circus Trains Unload

Watching a big circus unload its tons of apparatus and wild animals is one of the big thrills of the year for circus fans, young and old. Several hundred Mansfielders saw a scene like the one pictured above this morning when the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey show arrived for two performances at the fairground. While horses used to pull the wagons from train to show ground, trucks and tractors do the job now in less time. There were as many adults as children in the curious crowds this morning at the Erie railroad's Longview avenue siding and at the fairground to see how machine-like operations of setting up a big show are carried out. Seeing only truck and tractors at the railroad siding, one small boy edged up to an officer and asked: "Where are the elephants?" He was told that they would be along on the next train. The show moves in units, with the equipment requiring the most time to erect arriving first.

the seats were moved, and then the animals were hauled to their cages in the tented menagerie. Meanwhile, the performers and bandsmen were sleeping in cars on an Erie siding not far from the Union depot.

Because of the late arrival and a shortage of help, the circus doors weren't scheduled to open until 2:15 p. m. and the matinee was to get under way at 3:30 p. m. The doors will open at 7 p. m. and the evening performance will get under way at 8:15.

The Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey shows, on its final swing through the middlewest before starting its annual trip to Florida winter quarters, will present its performances in three rings and on two stages.

War bond buyers will occupy special sections in the big tent at both performances.

The big show has dozens of feature acts with Alfred Court's trained lions, tigers, leopards, and dogs all in the same cage as one of the highlights. A colorful spectacle "Let Freedom Ring," in which nearly all the 800 show performers will participate, and an opening feature, "Hold Your Horses," a replica of the street parade of 25 years ago, will be other show highlights. "Drums of Victory," will close the performances.

There will be scores of clowns and the old clown house fire, bareback riders, and aerial stars who will make daring leaps from one bar to another in the top of the tent.

While weather records were not available in Mansfield, today's 34-degree temperature was one of the lowest ever recorded here in September. The average date of the first killing frost is Oct. 5, but heavy frosts late in September are not uncommon. The first killing frost in the state last year was on Sept. 28.

Warmer weather was expected to move into the state today, lifting the threat of further damage to crops over the week-end, the weatherman said.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—Only mild cheers will be called for when the house next week adopts the Fulbright resolution, which favors American participation in appropriate international postwar machinery.

The resolution can mean anything so that anybody in congress can safely vote for it and explain later what he thought it meant. Even so it will represent progress. In view of the past, to have the house register a thumping two-thirds majority in favor of heaven on earth is a gain. Also it might encourage the jealous senate to develop a policy.

Clapper

At the time last winter when Rep. Fulbright—a young Arkansas Democrat—proposed his incongruous resolution, it was quite a bold move, for at that time congress was in a conspiracy of silence.

Discussion of the biggest decision this country must make in this generation has been long overdue. Rep. Fulbright has broken up the conspiracy by the simple device of drafting a pious sentiment to which no reasonable person could object. When you are teaching a child to swim you lead it out gently by the hand into the water. That, evidently is the way it has to be done although the senate may show itself bolder than the house in facing the real question.

When such a weather vane as Governor Dewey swings around to publicly endorsing American participation in a big-power alliance, the time obviously has come when Americans can talk out loud to each other about these things without causing undue fright to anybody.

The administration hopes to see a United Nations organization continue after the war. Inside of it would be continuation of the combined chiefs of staff, and close relations between the nations having the main military and naval forces.

Other nations would be brought into the task of preserving peace. For instance, France, when restored to her own freedom would play a natural part in pacification of the continent. In the South Atlantic, Brazil, as the strongest and most loyal Allied power in the southern hemisphere, would be a natural associate in United Nations policing. The United States need not be called upon to thrust its own forces into distant areas.

If this government is to play its part, it will be ready to support the use of force. The pattern is not frozen but much thought is being given to methods. As I wrote last winter, some in the administration have been thinking in terms of forbidding the aggressors from having aircraft of any kind, or from manufacturing certain weapons such as tanks and anti-aircraft guns. United Nations inspectors would be necessary. Violations of disarmament provisions would call for immediate and complete quarantine of the offending country, complete sealing of its borders against all traffic either in or out. If that did not bring the offender into line, then force would be used—a threat of bombing and if necessary actual destruction of the offending areas.

The Fulbright resolution can mean almost nothing or it can mean approval of such a program. For the Fulbright resolution favors creation of "appropriate" international machinery with "power adequate" to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations.

The blunt truth as spoken by Chairman Connally is that any international machinery must have authority to impose sanctions which would include economic sanctions and in the final analysis military and naval sanctions—and we have to be a part of it or it will be a failure.

That's the real question.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Col. Arthur V. McDermott, director of the draft in New York City, has started proceedings to cancel deferment of Second Front Joe Curran, president of that sector of the communist political front known as the National Maritime Union. Curran is 37, he has had successive deferments, and his present exemption will carry him over into his 39th year. He is now absent from the United States in the nominal status of boatswain aboard a merchant vessel bound for Europe.

Pegler

The Pilot, his official publication, states that he is "on vacation" and a press release issued by the union Aug. 20, said this hardy mariner had shipped out at that time "to avoid adverse weather." The same release quite frankly declares that Curran took the law into his own hands and left the country without authorization from either the state department or his draft board, because the state department had resorted to "dilatory tactics" in handling his application for a passport.

By the union's admission, his status of sailor is purely technical, his voyage is a vacation cruise in waters made safe for him by naval officers and bluejackets whom his communist comrades have harassed, heckled, ridiculed and reviled on merchant ships at sea and his real business in Britain, Russia and in Africa ports is the political business of the communist fifth column in the United States.

The chairman of Curran's draft board, Local Board 18, is Rev. Francis K. Shepherd, a Baptist clergyman. He has said Curran was "absolutely essential" to the operation of the union, that the union was essential to the war effort and that Curran therefore was indispensable. The truth is that this union, far from assisting the government in recruiting sailors and manning merchant vessels, has been engaged in a scramble for absolute control of the American merchant marine and has so effectively obstructed the work of conscientious officers and civilian officials in the government service, that they have given in all the way down the line in order to keep the ships sailing.

Dr. Shepherd may not know all this, but a man in his position should know it and he should be removed. This party-line organization of Curran's, from the nature of its name and by the exercise of the prestige and power conferred on it by communist sympathizers in the government, is able to carry on before the public a plausible pretense that it speaks for the merchant sailors. The truth is that it is held in low repute by real unionists and even by the real rough and tumble revolutionaries of the old Trotsky school.

An estimate of Curran was published in a recent issue of the Industrial Worker of Chicago, official organ of the old IWW, discussing Curran's attempt to suppress revelations concerning him and the NMU. In these dispatches, the Industrial Worker said an oldtime seaman in New York made a check along the line of Curran's patrols around the premises of the New York World-Telegram, challenged 12 of them, and found that five were department store workers, two were paid officials of unions controlled by the communists and one was an employe of the communist organ, the Daily Worker. Of the other four, one was a tugboat man, two were sailors who had "scabbed" a seaman's strike, and only one was a genuine, active merchant sailor.

"If his observation of 12 hold valid for the remainder of the picket line," the IWW paper said, "it means that the seafaring experience of 75 cent of these Nazis amounts to trips to New Jersey as passengers.

The Trotsky revolutionists always identify Stalin communists as Nazis.

"Yet," the editorial continues, "these people are giving all decent marine transport workers a black eye with all union men throughout the world. . . .

"He (Pegler) could not expose union corruption and blackguardism if none existed. The fault lies not in Pegler's comment on the facts, but in the facts themselves. . . ."

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Hi'ya, Stranger!

WELCOME to Manhattan, the versatile metropolis, boasting every kind of eat spot. Welcome to the capital of girl shows and the drama and to our Zoo in Central park (but please don't feed the llama). Welcome to our spacious and so gracious island mecca.

Feast your eyes and feast yourself and feast your sense of fun. This is the town for every taste, with thrills for everyone.

Kilgallen

Be sure you get to the Radio City Music hall in time to see the Rockettes in the always-stupendous stage show there. And, if you can manage it, sit in the first mezzanine, for the seats there are upholstered in a heavenly way.

If you are thrilled by exotic foods, try lobster shish kebab at the Golden Horn on meatless Tuesday, and that flaky, honey-drenched pastry they serve for dessert . . . or authentic chicken tamales on chili at tiny El Charro on Charles street in the village . . . or blinis with red caviar at the Russian Kretchma, or any of the Italian concoctions at the Red Devil.

If you can, take crosstown trip with Cabby Thomashefsky, who hacks from in front of Sardi's. He'll give you lively gossip of the theater along with the ride. . . . Don't arrive late for "Oklahoma," because if you do you'll miss the memorably lovely "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning," which opens the show.

If you want to see the kind of prospering, popular-priced New Korkese that is typical of the Broadway boom, and the new kind of hard-working, unsophisticated anything but blase "cafe society" that relaxes because it knows fun during the leisure hours is good for morale, go to Jack Dempsey's restaurant on Broadway.

You'll probably carry a menu away with you because you'll find an action picture of the ex-champ in fighting togs somewhere on it, and a page to jot down the names of all the spots you visited while you were in New York.

Does a lovely view do things to you? Then try the terrace of the Penthouse restaurant on Central Park south, looking over the park and up Fifth avenue. Be sure to arrive before dusk, just about twilight, and if you're staying for dinner, start with the hot hors d'oeuvres.

Or spend a half hour at the sidewalk annex of the Cafe de la Paix of the Hotel St. Moritz, particularly if you're early enough and lucky enough to get a table on the 59th street side. . . . Or the Claremont inn, palatial hut, settin' on the Hudson's edge.

If you have always considered Broadway synonymous with gorgeous girls and glamor clothes and gay songs, see "Early to Bed" at the Broadhurst, with the most men-ticing showgirls and chorines extant, and after the theater hie yourself to Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, a cabaret in the spectacular sense of the word.

* * *

For a sight of a weird game which hasn't hit the hinterlands, although it has been a standby in this town's saloons for years, go to the Artists and Writers club, better known as Bleecks (pronounced Blake's), next to the Herald-Tribune building, and watch the scribes and praise agents indulging in a pastime known as the "Match Game."

Don't walk out before the curtain call at "Arsenic and Old Lace," or you'll miss one of the funniest bits in the whole show.

If you like to see people letting their hair down, try a Sunday celebrity night at Leon & Eddie's, in 52nd street.

Mary Louise Haven, 17, of Euclid, O., was dead when brought to Mercy hospital. The driver of the truck failed to stop and police and highway patrolmen began an immediate search.

'THE HERBERTS' GIRD FOR FIGHT ON COMMISSION

Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General Line Up to Test Post-War Unit Legality.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—A battle of state political giants took shape today for the supreme court test on constitutionality of the Ohio postwar program commission.

The contest appeared to be virtually assured, and its reverberations may carry over into the 1944 governorship race, for the chief antagonists will be Lieut. Gov. Paul M. Herbert and Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert.

"The Herberts," as they are commonly grouped in capitol corridors, both are known to have aspirations for the governorship.

The lieutenant governor, as chairman of the postwar commission, has been authorized by the commission to press for a decision on the right of legislators to serve on the body.

He has rallied the considerable legal talent represented on the commission and today was preparing a petition to the supreme court for a mandamus writ against State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson to force payment of commissioners' expense vouchers.

Ferguson's request to the attorney general for an opinion whether the vouchers should be honored was awaited. The attorney general, in view of the customary reticence of his office to rule formally on constitutionality of legislation, was expected to advise Ferguson informally not to honor the expense vouchers.

The attorney general then would represent Ferguson in defense against the suit brought on behalf of the commissioners.

Apparently the only step which could now avert the court test would be decision by Ferguson to approve the expense vouchers—which total $11.67.

Ferguson's aides indicated he probably would not spoil the show between rival Republicans.

Commission forces, as outlined by the lieutenant governor, probably will include Paul Herbert, James M. Schooler, Columbus; Sens. Frank E. Whittemore, R., Akron, and Lawrence A. Kane, R., Cincinnati; House Speaker William M. McCulloch, R., Miami, and Rep. Lody Huml, D., Cuyahoga.

Arrayed against them and on behalf of Ferguson will be Attorney General Herbert.

TWO INJURED

Mansfield Girl, Ashland Youth Hurt as Car Rams Truck.

An Ashland youth and his Mansfield girl companion suffered multiple lacerations and bruises and minor burns shortly after 1 a. m. today when the car in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a truck and caught fire four miles northeast of Mansfield on U. S. Route 42.

Taken to General hospital were Harold Chance, 17, driver of the car, and Betty Lou Wright, 16, of 154 East Second street, Mansfield. Neither was believed hurt seriously and their condition was reported as good today.

State highway patrolmen said the Chance youth's car collided with a truck driven by Robert F. Reed, 25, Akron, on a long grade. Reed, who escaped injury, helped the couple out of the smashed car just as the gas tank burst, spraying fire over the automobile which was destroyed.

UNION TO TRY OWN PRESIDENT

Charges Him With Breaking No-Strike Pledge.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—James C. Adams, president of Local 1298 of the CIO-United Steelworkers of America, today faced charges of his union which may result in his expulsion from the group.

Adams was charged with violating the no-strike pledge for his actions in a work stoppage at the Cuyahoga works of the American Steel & Wire company. The disciplinary action is believed the first to be taken in the United States by a union against a member for such a violation, Gerald F. Horan, international representative of the union, said.

A five man trial committee will conduct the hearing tomorrow, Horan said.

CHARGES THEFT

Warrant Names Cleveland Woman in Disappearance of $20,000.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Police Captain Thomas Murphy today swore out a warrant charging Mrs. Anna Walsh with grand larceny in connection with the disappearance of $20,000 from the room of Albert Schmeeberger, elderly boarder at her home.

Schmeeberger said police so far have traced $17,000 of the money and recovered part of it.

An additional $4,490 was found in the refrigerator of the Walsh home by police.

MATERNITY AID COLLAPSE SEEN

Health Director Says Only $48,000 Remains to Care For 1,844 Applicants.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Ohio's federal emergency maternity aid program for wives of service men may break down completely within a few days unless more funds are forthcoming from Washington, State Health Director R. H. Markwith said today.

"If the program is to be maintained, it will be necessary for congress to make an additional appropriation within the next few days because the stork won't wait for anybody," Dr. Markwith said.

He explained that Ohio has been allocated $196,240 thus far for maternity aid. Of that amount, $147,982 has been encumbered for 1,910 cases. There were 1,844 other applications in Markwith's office today, and only $48,257 still unencumbered. More applications for aid flowed into the state health department daily.

Markwith said money has been encumbered only for those women who expect delivery in the near future. Temporary assistance may be sought from the army emergency relief fund to tide the program over until additional appropriations are made by congress, he said.

In Washington, Chairman Clarence Cannon, D., Mo., of the house appropriation committee, said a deficiency appropriation must be rushed through before Oct. 1 if a national breakdown of the program is to be averted.

CAUGHT PRAYING

Escaped Nazi Seized as He Kneels At Altar.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(INS)—Recognized as he knelt in prayer before a church altar, a German prisoner of war who escaped internment was back at Camp Chafee, Fort Smith, Ark., today.

Michael Heubinger, 33, who was captured by United States troops during the Sicilian campaign, was recognized by two garage men in the Charleston, Ark., Catholic church. They pounced on Heubinger and turned him over to a Camp Chafee sentry.

Circus day is fun for just about everybody except the police and sheriff's officers who get the traffic assignments in the showgrounds area. The cold weather this morning made it a tougher job than usual for the officers who were out before daylight to keep curious spectators from crowding around the Longview avenue siding on the Erie where the first contingent of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus unloaded. The other distasteful jobs for the traffic patrolmen were to come this afternoon and tonight at the fairground where thousands of circus goers were expected to create the city's biggest traffic jam of the year.

That paradox about starving in the midst of plenty is not just something you talk about, it's a reality to ration board workers. While they work in their office nearly freezing from lack of heat and bundled to the ears to keep warm they can look out the window and see 500 tons of coal on the ground below them. The huge pile of coal is there waiting to be shoveled into the furnaces of a near-by building.

OFFERS DAZE DRAFTEE DAD

Three Women Want to Marry Him, 44 Others Would Take Care of Two Daughters.

(By United Press)

DETROIT — Harry Barany, 27-year-old Highland Park, Mich., welder who reported to an army induction center with his two small daughters because there was "no one to leave them with" today had three proposals of marriage and 44 offers from would-be foster-mothers to show for resulting publicity.

"Women wrote from New Jersey and from Montana, from Elkhart, Ind., and from Somerset, Pa.," a somewhat dazed Barany said today.

"One 21-year-old girl wanted to marry me at once, while a 19-year-old just invited me to dinner with the hope I would like her.

"The third proposal was from a widow. The rest just wanted to give the children a home until the war is over. I would like to thank them all, but think I will just leave the children with my girl-friend."

Temporarily lodged in a Detroit hotel with his two daughters, freckled-faced Joan, who is six, and toddling Jane, a demure brunet of four, Barany said he has not yet given up hope that the army will not take him from the girls.

He was given an additionel 14-day furlough after he showed up at Fort Custer with his dependents last Sunday. He must report back "without the girls" Sept. 27.

MILK CRISIS STIRS NEW WAR OVER SUBSIDIES

Jones Would Use Tax Funds To Spur Production, Congress Bridles.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The administration's warnings of an impending crisis in milk production today set the stage for a new squabble in congress over government subsidies.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones asked senate banking and agriculture committee members to consider subsidy proposals to keep milk production at the required peak and promptly ran into the sort of subsidy criticism that enlivened last spring's sessions.

The need for immediate action to provide dairy farmers with an increase of at least a cent a quart to cover higher feed and manpower costs was not in dispute.

Senator Danaher (R-Conn.), a member of the senate banking committee, which heard Jones ask for advice at an informal conference, demanded that the administration make its own decision immediately. Danaher said congressional opposition to subsidies was well known and little was to be gained by consulting with members.

Jones said he was simply seeking suggestions, but he asked consideration for one or three proposals:

A flat one-cent a quart subsidy; a subsidy for higher-price milk areas and a price increase in other areas; or a subsidy to producers to cover increased food costs since September, 1943.

"There is another alternative," Senator Willis (R-Ind.) said, "and that is an increase in the price of milk."

Jones made it clear that this would run afoul of President Roosevelt's avowed program to hold the retail price line.

Banking Committee Chairman Wagner (D-N. Y.) said he was ready to support any subsidy and would oppose any price increase.
